Garbage containers for Georgetown dump

The region has followed up on a suggestion put forth by Halton Hills and containers are now located near the entrance to the Georgetown dump so people can drop garbage off without going too far into the landfill site.

Early this year a resident's car was hit when a bulldozer ran into it. The driver just narrowly escaped.

At the time Halton Hills Works Committee asked the region what the true meaning of "Enter At Your Own Risk" was and requested refuse containers be placed near the entrance of the dump.

Councillor George Maltby

thought the region's actions were prompted by the town's expression of concern for resident's safety but engineer Robert Austin said the plan to put garbage containers near the entrance had been in the works for some time. The town still hasn't received an answer concerning the real meaning of "Enter at your own risk."

Maltby noted region works committee will be discussing the Georgetown dump at a meeting this week and said he hopes Halton Hills councillors will express the town's concerns about safety.

Cut disposables

Halton Region should refuse to accept glass, metal or paper products at Halton landfill sites, according to councillor Jim Watson.

Mr. Watson brought the idea up at Milton Council Monday night. He said that would force the life extension of the current sites.

He claims that municipalities should refuse to pick those products up on the same day as the regular pick up.

He noted that the recyclable products would be picked up on another day and taken somewhere else to be recycled.

Councillor Brian Penman said he concurred with the line of thinking but would like to pursue it a bit further.

Staggering

An Inglewood man was arrested and charged with a liquor violation after he was observed staggering on Mill Street, Acton.
