some work with the girls. Nadia herself is scheduled to spend a day with them, although Bruce Andrews, physical education instructor at Acton High School, was not sure what she would be doing. Cultural events are also being planned, including sightseeing tours for the girls in the program. This is Rumania's centennial year, and Bucharest should be right in the middle of the celebra-

After the school, the girls are scheduled to go on a short tour of Copenhagen, Denmark, with no intention of learning gymnastics. This part of the trip is for relaxation only. The trip will cost the girls $995 each, but money has been raised through school and community groups to help defray the cost for them. All the girls are excited by the idea of the school, and hope that it will help them in next year's performance. Jocelyn was third overall in the Halton championships this year.

Badminton club ends '77 season

by Vic Morris

This last 13 weeks badminton birds have been flying around the high school gym during regular Monday evening meets.

High turnouts and loads of enthusiasm have been the order of the day for the 18 girls and 20 boys who registered for the sessions which concluded last Monday.

A tournament closed the season. Losers in the first round battled for consolation honours while first round winners went on to fight for champions finals. All finals games proved to be exciting and all were very close.

Champions The champs were Carole Saxon in ladies' singles, Gord Bruce in men's singles;

Paula Ruppert and Carole

Mike Morris with Gord Bruce in the men's doubles, and Carole Saxon with Don Coats in the mixed doubles. Consolation champs were

Saxon in ladies' doubles,

Tammy Allsop in ladies' singles. Dave Mills in men's singles, Lisa Near and Sandra Krisch in ladies' doubles, Gary Pickles with Doug Cooper in men's doubles and Julie and Pete Zions in the mixed doubles. School teachers Ann Lepik and Bruce Andrews were assisted by Joan and Vie Morris in organizing the club. Although the club dld not start until late in the season, rapid improvement in playing skills is apparent, particularly with players new to the game, and all look forward to keen competition next season.

Does Geneva Conference apply to indoor lacrosse

The Rams played an awfully silly lacrosse game last Thursday in the arena. The team counted 163 minutes in penalties over the two games, both of which they lost. It is not surprising that they did lose. Twenty-three of the 46 goals scored against them were power play goals. The team has some goalies, Graham Harrison in particular, but they can't do the job if there is nobody to help them. Bloxon was not much help to his own cause, coming out of the crease swinging on two occasions Thursday, against his old teammates, the Mississauga Merchants. There is a difference between aggressive, hard lacrosse

(good) and what the Rams were doing (bad). A clean check will usually take a man out, while a slash will usually get you thrown into the penalty box for your efforts. That sort of play doesn't do a whole lot to help a team. The two best players on the floor Thursday, I thought, were George Artem and Steve Wilson. Between them they accounted for a whopping four minutes in penalties, scoring five goals and notching up six assists in the course of the game. Settle down

Manager Ian Campbell remarked after the Mississauga game that he hopes the team settles down. The Merchants were a team the Rams expected to beat, and when they weren't playing shorthanded, they did, 15-12. Players are optimistic that things will pull together, and they are probably right. There are only a few players on the team taking all the penalties, but they are doing plenty of damage now. All that's needed, as Campbell says, is some discipline. Ron Turkosz says "give us four more games". He expects the team to be winning then, and with a minimum of luck, they should be. They just started working on plays for the first time this

Monday. When they combine some teamwork with the scoring punch they possess, look out. Dirty money found on former sports editor Blast from the past: Eric Elstone, my immediate predecessor in this prestigious post, has fallen into some money which he would like to keep hidden from the tax boys. In a (shady) backroom manoeuvre typical of sports editors the world over, he lifted $40 in an illicit hockey pool. He didn't do it on skill, mind, you, he just lucked out by drawing the right names from a hat. Congratulations to him from us, the less fortunate.

Dills Pickles are a team in trouble

The Dills Pickles, an as yet unborn softball team representing the Free Press, the Georgetown Independent and the Milton Champion, is already having personnel problems. Some people won't play, others can't play, and some are conscientiously (Inding excuses not to play. But when we get it all together, look out Blue Jays.
