Julian Reed

Looking forward to term

As energy critic for the Liberal party Julian Reed, re-elected MPP for Halton-Burlington is looking forward with excitement towards the new session at Queen's Park next Monday.

Reed says the Liberals as the new official opposition party, after edging out the NDP 34-33 in the June 9 election, will have much more to say in the development of Ontario.

"I feel we can come to grips and do something about the problems in this province," he said.

One issue Mr. Reed wants to tackle is that of regional government. Recently Darcy McKeough, the provincial treasurer and the Minister of Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs, said an independent review of regional government in Hamilton-Wentworth would be established and Mr. Reed said he is hoping for a similar commitment for Halton.

Mr. Reed said he believed in co-operation between municipalities but didn't think that required the creation of another level of government.

Mr. Reed felt it is only logical that municipalities co-operate in such areas as developing waste recovery systems and planning, but he didn't concede that areas such as these should be the basis for regional government.

The problem with regional government according to Mr. Reed is that it divorces itself from the people and the communities it serves.

"There is no way the average person can relate to the region," he said.

"The regional structure removes itself from the real political base which is the community and that's one reason why it doesn't work well," Mr. Reed added.

He felt this was especially true in Halton.

"We have distinct individual communities and we're asking these communities to give up their sovereignty to subject themselves to something they can't relate to."

In the next session Mr. Reed also hopes to deal indirectly with the location of the regional landfill site F, south of Milton which the Tremaine-Brittania Citizens' Group is attempting to block through the legal process.

"I have no influence on the regional decision," said Mr. Reed. "But I can plead the case personally and I have done so in as many conceivable ways to support the people."

Mr. Reed, however, feels the real answer to the problem is to push the provincial government to allocate funds for the construction of 100 per cent resource recovery plants instead of having municipalities building more landfill sites.

In the past George Kerr, the Minister of Environment, has denied the existence of 100 per cent waste recovery systems, but Mr. Reed claims they do exist.

"The technology is with us now," said Mr. Reed. "It's simply a matter of the FIVE ESKIMOS from Baker Lake in the Northwest Territories came south to Sheridan College's Heavy Equipment School in Milton, for specialized training in roadbuilding equipment. George Redd and Dan Beck of Milton's Blue Cab Co., who drove the visitors to and from school each day, treated the Eskimos to a dinner at the Tai Woo Inn before they headed home on the weekend. From left seated are Mr. Redd, Mr. Beck, Hugh Haqqi, David Owingayak and Ovid Kinnowatner. Standing are Alex Iglookyouak and Paul Ookowit.

Eskimo workers learn heavy equipment here

By Sherry Ceell
Information Sheridan

The annual spring budding of the trees may seem like a common occurrence to southern Ontario residents. But to Paul Ookowit, it's almost a miracle.

Paul, an Eskimo from Baker Lake in the Northwest Territories, had never even seen a tree until last month. That's when he and four other men from this tiny Eskimo settlement near Hudson's Bay began taking a special nine-week training program at Sheridan's Heavy Equipment School in Milton.

The five are students in a heavy equipment operator's program designed by Sheridan especially for them and sponsored by the federal Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

"The program is unique in that there is no classroom training involved," explains Frank Murphy, Administrator of the Heavy Equipment School.

"Because few of the Eskimos can read or write English—one doesn't even speak English—all training is conducted in the field by the process of illustration. We show them what to do and how to do it and then hand the equipment over to them. When it rains, they move indoors and watch films."

The Eskimos range in age from 21 to 38 and come from a wide variety of backgrounds. Ovid Kinnowatner, 27, and Hugh Haqqi, 21, are single. Alex Iglookyouak, 38, David Owingayak, 36, and Paul, 37, are each married with two or more children.

Some, like Paul, have never been away from home before. Others have taken previous training programs in Winnipeg and Ottawa. David, an expert hunter, was the guide for a much-publicized 1970 expedition from Baker Lake to Yellowknife. The 850-mile snowmobile trip took the 11-man crew only 21 days to complete despite a three-day blizzard which sent them 32 miles off their course.

Some of the Eskimos are employed with the municipal works department in Baker Lake and are being paid a salary while taking the program. For others, it's the first time they've driven anything other than a snowmobile.

When they returned home June 17, all went to jobs with the works department in road building and other forms of community development involving the operation of heavy equipment.

The Eskimos, who all stayed at the Halton Hotel in Oakville, were bused to and from school every Monday to Friday in a taxi van. After breakfast in the cafeteria, they head for the school's 200-acre practice field, where they spend the day maneuvering 10-ton trucks, bulldozers, graders and front-end loaders with the help of hand signals from a qualified instructor.

"There's been no difficulty at all communicating," says Murphy. "They're very receptive and have adapted well to the program."

There are some things, though, that have taken a little longer to adapt to. Elevators, for instance. Paul's first encounter with one came during a weekend visit to Ottawa and the Parliament buildings, where, a little apprehensive about Minister of Environment admitting that what Mr. Reed is saying is not all that bad."

Mr. Reed said he hopes to make some headway into 100 per cent resource recovery by increasing the pressure on Mr. Kerr to recognize its existence.

"I consider this my responsibility and will do everything possible to push the government into recognizing this," he said.

Mr. Reed added that the Liberal party backs the development of resource recovery systems because garbage is a province wide problem.

"If this session lasts long enough I think we will get an active commitment from the government in that direction," he said. "It has to happen, it's only natural."

On a provincial wide basis Mr. Reed hopes the Liberals can work with the provincial government in establishing a competent job creation program.

"I think we can do it if we work in the spirit of co-operation which is more likely than before," he said. "We should be able to say to the government, if you don't have a good program, use ours."

Mr. Reed hopes the Conservatives will look into a program to help make home insulation standard in homes although he admitted the Liberals wouldn't demand it be made compulsory in each home.

One of the issues the Liberals will be stressing in the next session said Mr. Reed is that of limiting government spending. If people are to be restricted on their income then so should the government be restricted on what it can spend said Mr. Reed.

"There will be a strong effort by the Liberal party to make its programs become reality in the minority government situation," Mr. Reed said.

Lot details cleared up

Land Division Committee helped an Acton lawyer clear up details of a lot to be conveyed during a meeting on the Seventh Line offices on June 14.

Lawyer G. R. Chapman was concerned about Lot 255 owned by John and Mae Palmer on the registered plan 1098. "These are not registered in a plan of subdivision", Chapman said.

Move on dump

Halton Regional Council voted 14-10 to implement a four step plan designed by Regional Solicitor R. M. Martin to obtain the necessary approvals for a major landfill site in Milton.

The action approved at council's meeting Wednesday sets the forum for another court battle between the region and the Tremaine-Brittania Citizens' Group. The group has been fighting the battle for more than a year now.

David Katz a spokesman for the group said it would appear there is no alternative for the citizens' group and that the group will more than likely take the region to court. He said he was busy setting up a meeting with the group's solicitor.

Environmental Lawyer David Estrin said the action taken by the council is clearly illegal and defies an order handed down earlier this spring by the Supreme Court of Ontario.

The four steps recommended by Martin include making application to the Town of Milton for official plan and zoning by-law changes to provide for a proposed waste disposal site; the acquisition of required lands; application of a certificate of approval or temporary certificate of approval from the Ministry of the Environment to operate the proposed site and approval of the financing of the proposed waste disposal site.

Regional Property Agent Vince Geraghty confirmed reports about the options and indicated he was dealing with three property owners in the area.

Geraghty says the options were taken in February or March. He said council could not buy the land until after Milton's official plan and zoning by-law had been amended and not until the Ontario Municipal Board and The Ministry of the Environment had approved the purchase.

A court order handed down earlier this spring forbids any purchase of land for the purpose of a landfill site until those conditions are met.

Ignore 3,100

Halton Hills council ignored a 3,100 signature petition Tuesday night, voting 8-3 to build a new $750,000 library in Cedarvale Park.

In March council approved the building of a new library in Cedarvale but backed down in May in the face of the largest petition ever sent to the town.

The special meeting Tuesday involving councillors, Halton Hills Library Board and a special citizens' committee was called to resolve the new library issue.

Councillors repeatedly complained about the presentation of the alternative sites from Don Long, head of the protesting citizens' committee. Several times councillors said the library board's plan should be backed because no alternatives were proposed.

Domtar deal

A deal for purchase of the closed Domtar plant by Scott Paper is no closer following a three hour meeting at Halton Regional headquarters last Wednesday between municipal and Scott Paper officials.

Scott Paper vice-president and general manager, eastern manufacturing, Bernard Goulet, and three other company officials met with Region Chairman Ric Morrow, Mayor Tom Hill, Councillor Peter Pomeroy, planner Mario Venditti, Alex Giffen and Ken Hogg, Ministry of the Environment and Ray Cripps of the regional works department.

In an interview Pomeroy said there are "technical problems still to be resolved"
