

CVCA admin. bldg. could cost $702,000

Although a cost breakdown for the proposed administration building for the Credit Valley Conservation Authority indicates the building could go as high as $702,000, Authority executives don't want to spend more than $382,000 for phase one of construction.

"I'm certainly not in favor of going to the Ministry for $702,000," commented Authority Chairman Grant Clarkson at a recent executive meeting.

Paring costs to a minimum, Brampton member Kei Whillans led the executive in lengthy discussion.

Government appointed member Bob Harrison pointed out the Ministry of Environment had already approved a cost of $550,000 for the building constructed in two stages. The remaining monies are for parking, paving, architects fees, and landscaping.

It was generally felt, although request for Ministry approval of the full amount be made.

"We'll never get the building any cheaper," said Harrison - costs would be kept down to a bare minimum starting with the $300,000 first stage. This will supply the Authority, which has rapidly outgrown their Meadowvale house headquarters, with staff accommodation, main offices and a main meeting room.

Wrong name

An incorrect name was published in a story in the September 21 issue on the 283-acre industrial park at Five Sideroad and Highway 25. The newspaper referred to Leval Construction - the correct name of the company is Lavalp.

NORMAN PRICE, who has the longest service of new 40 year members, and William Spielvogel, youngest of new 25 year members, chat at the Beardmore Quarter Century club dinner.

President Thomas Jefferson Hill?

Is Halton Hills destined to become a republic? Is the town going to break away from Halton, Ontario and Canada and go it alone. Is Tom Hill going to become the Rene Levesque of North Halton?

These questions are prompted by the fact someone thinks Halton Hills is ruled by a President.

Tuesday town office staff were surprised to discover a letter in the mail addressed to the President of Halton Hills.

After a few remarks and chuckles staff decided to send this piece of mail onto Mayor Hill.

It would appear to have been an error.

Or is it?

Does the letter writer know something about the town's future everyone else doesn't. Or is it the writer doesn't know Halton Hills is a town.

With the town's name it is easy to see he might have thought he was writing to the president of a golf club.

Perhaps the Mayor's full name, Thomas Jefferson Hill, confused the writer.

38 see film

Last Friday evening 38 people attended the showing lies My Father Told Me at the library. It was the largest attendance in the series of film shows.

The last movie is planned for this Friday night. It's The Luck of Giner Coffey, a recent award-winner.

Just a couple of people saw the film on metrication, and about a dozen watched the film on Malcolm Lowry.
