

ONCE COMPLETED the addition to the provincial building on Steeles Ave. will house two new criminal courts which Judge Bill Sharpe says will improve the courtroom situation.

Provincial court adds needed rooms

The expansion of the provincial building on Steeles Ave., Milton which includes two more criminal division courtrooms, will help ease the current overcrowding situation in the Halton courts according to Judge Bill Sharpe.

Judge Sharpe said that under the current situation at the old court house on Brown St. in Milton one of the three provincial court judges, John Robinson, can only sit during three days of the week.

Judge Sharpe added that it's difficult to handle cases that require long preliminaries, because there are no courts available.

Besides easing the overcrowding situation, Judge Sharpe said the new facilities will be an improvement over the older court house.

When the new facilities are finished the Milton court house along with the Georgetown court house will be shut down he said.

Judge Sharpe said this was a move to have the courts in one location. The provincial building currently houses the family courts.

In addition Judge Sharpe said new facilities are also being looked at for the Burlington court house.

The addition to the provincial building will double the existing space in the two storey building. The first floor will increase the space for the land registry facilities of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

The second floor will house two provincial criminal division courtrooms, judges' quarters, interview rooms, public areas and administration offices for the Ministry of the Attorney General.

The basement will consist of holding facilities for prisoners awaiting trial as well as storage and building service areas.

The cost of the entire expansion is $2,059,853.

Foodland symbol

Agriculture and Food Minister Bill Newman has released the design of the symbol which will highlight the ministry's food promotion campaign, Foodland Ontario.

The symbol, which incorporates the words "Foodland Ontario" and the stylized trillium, represents growth and the productivity of Ontario's agricultural land. It will be used extensively in the ministry's media advertising program scheduled to begin in early November.

The minister, speaking just prior to leaving on a food expert mission to Japan, said that many marketing boards, commodity groups and retailers have also expressed interest in using the symbol. "I hope to see it widely displayed in the coming months, particularly on food packages and containers," he said.

The symbol will be the centrepiece of the ministry's "Ontario Food Festival" at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair in November.

The minister also said that provincial assistance is available for commodity group promotions. Under this shared cost promotion program, participating commodity groups will develop and carry out promotion campaigns with the ministry providing financial assistance.

Mr. Newman said the major portion of the campaign will be direct media advertising to the consumer. "We want all consumers in the province to participate in the future of agriculture in Ontario by increasing their consumption of home grown products," he said.

Sense of helping is reward for volunteers

The Acton Branch of the Canadian Cancer Society held the first meeting of the season at the home of president Gloria Coats and several new members were welcomed on September 8.

Plans were finalized for the entry in the fall fair parade and for the booth which was upstairs in the arena this year. Cathy McGilivray

Group's meeting

W.M.S. and W.A. Group met at the home of Mrs. Max Milne on Wednesday afternoon. The meeting opened with prayer followed by hymn.

The Secretary and Treasurer's reports were read by Miss Elva Pearson and Mrs. D. Gray. Mrs. A. Duby gave the report on cards which were sent to the ill and shut-ins in September. Mrs. L. Johnston gave the report on the Glad Tidings. The members decided to have a cash bazaar again this year. Donations will be received by Mrs. D. Gray, Mrs. W. Malby had charge of the Bible reading followed by prayer, and Mrs. M. McNabb gave a paper on Christmas shopping and the Christmas spirit of it. The roll call was answered by a Thanksgiving message. The meeting closed with a poem.

A social half year was enjoyed over the tea cups. The November meeting will be at the home of Mrs. A. Duby on November 2 at 2 p.m.
