

The Pretenders to stage Our Gal Sal next year

The delightful play entitled Our Gal Sal has been taken up by a small and informal group of local actors for production next January.

The Pretenders, a ten member group, has experience spanning at least two decades. Its most recent performances were of the play Look Who's Here. Performances were held in the Christian Reformed Church here, in Guelph and also in the Georgetown District Christian School.

The Pretenders, nine actors plus a prompter, started to work on Our Gal Sal last September. Each week they get together in a member's home for rehearsal.

Our Gal Sal is the story of a young man who gets his comeuppance for underestimating one of his childhood friends, an ugly duckling farm girl, who grows into a beauty.

Taking the title role of Sal Skinner is Willy De Jong. The part of the young snobby man Glenn Vandyne is to be played by Thys Splinter. Alice Kroezen plays Glenn's society matron mother Cecilia Vandyne. Glenn also has a democratic and charming sister named Allison, who is played by Thea Krul.

Sal has a relative in the play too. Her gossiping aunt is Wilma Barends.

The upper class also gets into the act. Dagmar Waring, who's only credentials are that he belongs to the elite, is played by Alice Schriber.

Henry Venema plays the part of wealthy financier Dexter Westbrook.

Henny Venema took the part of character Daisy Judkins, who is said to hail from Soap Lake.

And to round out the action, there is policeman Ronald Spangler, whose beat fell to Jerry Kroezen.

The job of prompter was taken up by Ina Kremer.

The Pretenders are having some difficulties with rehearsals because some members, who work shifts, are forced to miss some of the preparations.

However, as Wilma Barends of Mill Street East said, the group is just working people trying to put some fun into one night of the week.

FULL HOUSE PACKED THE YMCA for their luncheon Thursday. Y served macaroni and cheese along with cold cut platters in the successful fund raising venture.

Centre delayed

Halton Regional Council's decision not to pick up options on a 50-acre parcel of land adjacent to the Bronte Sports Complex could upset plans for a south operations centre.

The centre was deemed necessary by the Public Works Department so that the various groups that operate from scattered locations across the region could come under one roof.

At the works committee a week earlier the committee decided against buying the 50 acres but recommended the purchase of 10 acres.

The 10 acres would have accommodated the works centre but the staff recommendation to purchase the 50-acre parcel at $10,000 per acre would have provided space for a resource recovery plant and a new sewage plant for the town of Oakville.

Regional Chairman Ric Morrow told the council, officials of the province had told him the 50-acre parcel was available but if the region wanted to take an option it would have to pay interest when it finally did acquire the land.

Milton Mayor Don Gordon wanted the region to buy enough land to accommodate a resource recovery plant as well as a service centre.

"Quit spinning your wheels on resource recovery. If you're serious about resource recovery you have land before you build the plant and this is the day to start."

Oakville Councillor Ron Planche objected to plans to build a works yard or resource recovery plant right where the town planned open space.

Mr. Morrow suggested the land was in the greenbelt and he said it was doubtful that the province would allow a resource recovery plant there.

Council decided not to buy any of the land or take out options on it. That leaves the works department without a site for a works yard.

Works Committee Chairman Jack Raftis said after the meeting that he did not anticipate trying to bring the matter up again or trying to convince council to buy the land.

Busy

MPP Julian Reed attended all three Remembrance Day services in the area Sunday, at Acton, Georgetown and Glen Williams.
