bears, oh my," whispered Dorothy on her trip through the woods to the Land of Oz. But, had she the opportunity to visit the African Lion Safari in Rockton, she'd have seen more wild and exotic animals than she could ever shake a stick at . . . and in greater safety too.

Located within an hour's drive of most of Central Ontario, the Rockton African Lion Safari is open every day except Christmas offering an around-the-world tour of the great wild kingdom. The compound brings you face-toface with those lions and tigers and bears . . . and elephants and rhinos and zebras and ostrich and much, much more.

Looking Back or: it-wasn't-as-bad-as-it-seemed-at-ine

Acton Library was a noisy place this year-there is no argument about that. Not only were we competing with the road graders and the high pressure pumps but we managed

We started out with the thud of discarded books, the turfed out duplicates and deadwood. Puffing in our wake Esther Taylor juggled mounds of catalog cards as she struggled to keep up with the de-filing, the in-filing and the re-filing. If this sounds confusing, it was. Esther did a lot of talking to herself

In spite of dire predictions we all survived and even got the mess cleaned up enough to welcome Lynne Simioni, our Experience '77 summer student who settled down with our shelf list and started an inventory. Lynne not only uncovered most of our old sins, she also managed to give us an idea how much had gone AWOL. (ouch). In keeping with our over-all reorganization plan Mrs. Merrin started selecting the junior non-fiction that would be moved into the new Junior Library.

On top of all these internal rumblings and cobweb clearings the carpenters, painters, electricians and landscapers bustled around, and after the dust had settled we had acquired: two planters abloom with a riot of petunias; two birch trees; a shiny coat of paint on our soffits and doors; an elegant sheathing of panelling in the Watson room to highlight Mrs. Watson's portrait; and, a special set of steps, a fire exit door and a supply of bulletin and peg boards for our bright and cosy new Junior Library. As the crowning glory

Mrs. Merrin created a gorgeous felt tapestry of the Pied

As soon as our Jr. Library was ready for occupancy the library staff moved into top gear and carted tons of books up and down the stairs. All the junior fiction moved downstairs and about half the non-fiction (ages 0-9) while the line going up the stairs hauled the reference collection out of the basement into the midst of the main collection. All this heaving and panting was accompanied by the clang of steel shelving crashing as we trimmed and fitted our shelves to suit our collection. About two months later and a collective 25 pounds trimmer we opened the doors one day to a quiet library - cureka! Everything more or less in its place.

Early on in the year it became obvious that our circulation figures for the year were going to be substantially lower than the previous year's. We don't know whether to attribute this to the cursed road reconstruction, the vile weather or our own abstraction due to the continual upheaval and re-organization. Whatever it was we've set our sights on another goal for 1978. Better service and more of it. We have lots of bright new books, significant additions to our record collections, music and stories on cassette, numerous new magazine sub-tacting other community agencies to publicise the library's home visiting service and some of our other less well-known programs, such as the talking books, large print books,

So, if you got discouraged this year and gave up on us, -- come back, all is forgiven. Our road is paved, the dust has settled and you'll find it lots easter to find things. As a special bonus we'll let you in on a secret. The Board has decided to try an experiment in fine-free operation. That means as of

Jan. 1st, 1978 you can return your overdue books and pay no fines, because really and truly-we don't want your money,

As a last word there is R-2 D-2. Right now he's laid up for a re-fit, but one of these days we'll have him wired for light and sound and programmed to zap giggling teenagers and find lost books, In the meantime come in and visit him in the Snow and cold temperatures prompt the animals (particularly the big cats) into animated activity. More gregarious than in the warm summer months, the llons in winter seem to belie their notorious aura of feroclousness and playfully frolic with frosty Ontario as a backdrop.

But, cute and cuddly as they may seem, keep your car windows closed tight. A sign at the entrance to the Safari warns that trespassers will be eaten.

animals in the Safari, only a very few are housed indoors during the winter months. For the children, the Safari offers a Pet's Corner. Here, youngsters are encouraged to feed the animals . . . something that is distinctly frowned upon on the Safari trails. Vending machines dispense a mixture of grains, nuts and corn that children can feed to wallables, penguins, llamas, sheep, goats, deer, rabbits, donkeys and zonkies . . . a cross between domestic donkeys and zebras.

> While visiting the Safari, guests are invited to visit the 200-seat cafeteria, the native bazaar (stocked with authenfacts), snack bars, the camera shop, scenic railway and the water safari. For those who want to return to the Safari in summer an inexpensive and interesting 150acre campground is available at a nominal fee. An added bonus is waking to the sounds of Ontario's biggest alarm clocks . . . the big cats. For more information on the Llons in Winter, contact the Airican Lion Safari, Rockton, Ontario LOR 1X0, or phone (519) 623-2620. For information on other winter vacations, write: Ontatio Queen's Park, Travel, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 2E5 or call collect (416) 965-4008.

Cross-country skiing economical family fun

Cross-country. It doesn't tion . . . anything but.

Over the past few years, cross-country skling has gained popularity in Ontario and no wonder! Cross-country necessitates a modest cash outlay, little training and reaps a wealth of benefits including exercise, fresh air, solitude (if you want it) and a chance to enjoy the province's scenic beauty.

Invented by the nomadic tribes of Northern Asia, its purpose was to transport people up mountains, across plains and down valleys. In Ontario, its purpose is to provide one of the most enjoyable forms of winter recreation available.

The biggest selling factor in cross-county skling is that it can be done almost anywhere that there is snow cover. Though municipal parks and open fields are suitable for some cross-country jaunts, perhaps the best way to enjoy the experience is at one of Ontario's more than 100 cross-country ski resorts.

Trail use fees are nominal at most cross-country resorts. Prices range from $1 to $3 for a full day's skiing and, at Molson's Park in Barrie, trail use is free if you provide your own equipment. For first-timers, ski rentals are available at the ski areas or through sports outfitters in most larger towns. The prime advantage to both first-time and accomplished ski tourers at a bona ide resort is the well marked, machine groomed trail. Parallel tracks outline trails to make for easier, troublefree skiing. At most resorts, rest stops are placed at regular intervals to prevent overtiring and the skier can choose his or her own trail

Comfortable clothing and a knapsack are important to every cross-country skier. Though you may be cold when you begin, within a few minutes you'll be quite warm, The knapsack will help in both shedding clothing and in carrying some energy foods like chocolate, nuts and rai-

The pnly clothing taboo is wearing denim jeans. Providing too little leg room along the thigh and knee and too much material around the ankle, denim jeans can trip even the best skiers, absorb moisture and freeze readily, Almost any other type of slacks will do, but woollen knickers and long socks are the best.

To check out snow conditions for your cross-country skling trip, the Barrie Office of the Ministry of Industry and Tourism has several toll free numbers to call. From Toronto call 364-4722, 364-4785 or 364-4855. Regular lines from other points are (705)

The order has been placed the company's premises on for equipment which allow both mobile and studio former productions. A Carling-O'Keefe special events caravan has been bought by Halton Cable Systems Ltd. to cover events around the area.

The new equipment includes two cameras and special effects equipment that permits switching between cameras. The package has been kept as simple as possible so volunteers from the community, from teenagers to senior citizens, can operate it with a minimum of supervision. John Ollivier, program director, said many people have expressed interest in producing or appearing in local programs, and working on the technical side of production. He pointed out Rud Whiting will return with the popular talk show, he hosted last season.
