

Pictures from the past

ICE WAS AN IMPORTANT commodity years ago. It was cut from ponds, and stored in ice houses all summer. Deliveries were made regularly to home ice boxes. This ice cutter was made by Sandy McIsaac, the owner of the Highway Garage on Main N., which was razed a couple of years ago. In the photographs above, the machine is seen cutting ice on Henderson's Pond, which was behind the Free Press plant.

Today's recipes

Some delicious chicken recipes from the Synchronized Swim Team's cook book.

CRAB-STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS

6 chicken breasts, skinned and boned
 1/2 c. chopped onion
 1/2 c. chopped celery
 3 tsp. butter
 3 tsp. dry white wine
 1 - 7 1/2 oz. can crabmeat - drained
 1/2 c. stuffing mix
 2 tsp. flour
 1/2 tsp. paprika
 1 c. Hollandaise sauce
 2 tsp. dry white wine
 1/2 c. shredded Swiss cheese

In morning or day ahead - pound chicken to flatten. Sprinkle with salt, pepper. Cook onion and celery in 3 tsp. butter, until tender. Remove from heat, add wine, crab and stuffing mix, toss. Divide mixture among breasts, roll up and secure with toothpicks. Combine flour and paprika, coat chicken. Place in 11 1/2 x 7 1/4 x 1 1/4" baking dish. Refrigerate.

1 1/2 hrs. before serving - heat oven to 375 degrees F. Drizzle 2 tsp. melted butter over chicken. Bake uncovered for 1 hr. Meanwhile make Hollandaise, add remaining wine and cheese, stir until cheese melts. Transfer chicken to heated platter, drizzle sauce over, garnish with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

The Biblical flood

By Ward Chesworth
 Land Resource Science
 University of Guelph

With local rivers and streams in full spate, and overflowing their banks, it seems a reasonable time of year to speculate about the greatest flood of all. Was the deluge of the Bible for real, or is it just a fanciful story? On the whole, the geological and archaeological evidence for the story's being based on a real flood is very strong.

In 1922, Sir Leonard Woolley led an expedition into the valley of the rivers Tigris and Euphrates in what is now Iran. Near the site of the ancient city of Ur he discovered a low mound, strewn with flint implements and fragments of pottery. Woolley dug into it and found a layer of mud with painted pottery and other artifacts embedded in it. Beneath was a clean water-laid clay and deeper still was a deposit containing Stone Age implements. During the next four years Woolley found this sequence repeated almost everywhere he dug, and gradually he came to realize that the water-laid clay was evidence of a vast inundation that destroyed the stone age settlements, receded and left the fertile soils that later civilizations were built on.

This flood, of course, was not a universal one: it was confined to the valley of the two rivers. But it became a central, unforgettable fact in the minds of the people who lived there. Several stories were written of the flood and all that have survived show a close parallel with the Biblical story. There is always a good, faithful man who is warned by the gods to build a boat against the coming deluge. He does so and saves his family and the game and beasts of the field. The rest of humanity is drowned. As the waters recede, he sends out a dove, a swallow and a raven and when the raven falls to return, he knows it is safe to emerge. He steps out on a mountain top and pours a libation to the gods.

Later, the story was retold in Greece as "Deucalion's Flood". Later still it became part of the Hebrew Bible in which form it entered our own cultural and religious heritage.

In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened. And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

OUR READERS WRITE:

Unrest in civil service

Dear Sir,

I only hope Dr. Frank Philbrook knows more about the human body and its functions than he knows about politics and the public service. (Biggest Bang for our Buck, April 15).

Dr. Philbrook wants to control the federal bureaucracy by freezing hiring in the civil service—a nice political gimmick—a motherhood issue bound to get votes.

The fact is the freeze is already on. Civil servants are being laid off or not replaced. The statistics look good because they do not show the private outside contractors that are being given healthy contracts to do the work formerly done by civil servants. As for the dismissal of incompetent civil servants I wish we had such legislation for politicians.

Dr. Philbrook here shows his ignorance of the private and public sector. A civil servant can be fired much easier than a union member in the private sector. Trade unions in the private sector are much more militant and protective of their members than are their civil service counterpart.

Of course everything is not right in the civil service. There is definite unrest, and with good reason. A good example is "designation". A designated person cannot strike. That sounds fairly reasonable to the general public. Prison guards, federal fire fighters, etc., comes to your mind, but do you agree that as in a recent legal strike, the people who tended the Governor General's greenhouses should be "designated"?

I can cite many instances of such abuses. The civil service does just that. Provide a service. It can be compared to an army in its size and structure.

If an army doesn't win battles you do not fire the troops. You fire the Generals.

Humane and courageous

April 26, 1978

The Editor of Acton Free Press
 Acton, Ont.

Dear Editor:

Through the Free Press I would like to express my feelings to our Citizens of the Year, the Firefighters.

Their voluntary services are most humane and courageous!

Today I heard the fire siren, and through the window I watched some of those men running and running up the Beardmore hill to get into their cars... and I wondered... praying for them all.

Thank you.

Truly yours

How to motivate kids

(The following letter is in reply to Jennifer Barr's comments about children in her column Sideroad Five.)

Dear Mrs. Barr:

Yes, Ma'am, we do have a guaranteed way to get children to do their chores willingly, with or without a smile, WITHOUT BEING ASKED.

In fact, I'm trying desperately to find a way to stop them. I always maintained that if I could have one wish it would be to have someone follow me around and pick up after me. Now that Steve, our 13-year-old has granted my wish, I'm not so sure I really want everything tucked away so tidily that I don't know where anything is.

I've actually had to call him out of class at school to ask him where he put my glasses and my shoes so I could leave the house fully dressed.

Now I suppose you want to know the secret of my success. Simple - Don't do it yourself!

You may have to wallow in a lot of muck for a while, but sooner or later the offspring are going to enquire "Why can't we have a nice tidy house like Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Smith?" And you will answer, "we can dear, if you want to do it."

Secret Number 2 is a little more complicated but equally effective. Dad, who rules with a little more iron thumb than Mom, categorizes all the duties, and lists them according to priority. The list goes up on the family bulletin board where everyone can see it.

Incidentally, if you don't have a bulletin board, get one.

All the mechanical and electrical chores are assigned to Geoff, our electronic wizard. The crafty type assignments such as woodworking, furniture repair, and outdoor duties are listed under "JIM" who excels in that field. And Mr. Clean gets stuck with the household stuff, like washing windows et al.

They are listed in order of paying and non-paying jobs. Naturally the kids break their backs getting the paying jobs done first. So we have to add a stipulation that no money is forthcoming until all duties are completed.

The next category lists all the volunteer tasks, with the price beside it. Naturally, the dirty oven goes to the highest bidder, and is finished in record time. At times it is wise when listing the oven, fridge and toilet cleanups, to pin the cash to the list. This way they trip over each other to complete the task and collect.

Now Mom, you and Dad are free to assist and advise, but don't boss, and under no circumstances must you ever finish an incomplete chore. Otherwise you've lost the game.

Speaking of games, introduce the work in a fun way, make them think they're having fun, and you'll get far more work out of them.

As in our initial agreement, I absolutely refuse to take any responsibility for the care and feeding of the dog, cat, or fish. They also do their own washing, ironing and mending. Otherwise they have nothing to wear.

Yes, we do have our fair share of bawls and squalls, floods and breakages. But we don't see or hear anything. Just make sure that your floors and carpets come in all the latest hues of peanut butter, ketchup, mustard, grape juice and hot chocolate. That way nobody will know if anything gets spilled. Never invade the privacy of their bedrooms, nor even suggest that they clean them.

Just pin up the list and go away and leave them alone.

Of course, if you're lucky enough to have a Mr. Clean in your brood he will do the vacuuming, keep the kitchen floor scrubbed and polished, put everything away where you may never find it again until you move, and keep his big brothers posted on their turns to wash the dishes, cook the meal, and scrub the bathrooms. He also sees that Mom keeps all her junk in her own private office, or the bedroom, then carefully closes the doors so no one can see who has the messiest quarters in the house.

Having a lazy mother has made our kids kind of special. Even to serving my tea in bed in the mornings. No, they are not for sale, but we will fire them out for a price.
