

STEVEN BIGG takes a jump in his freestyle skateboard routine. The senior division had to prepare a two minute show and complete the slalom course. Steven took second place.

ROBERT PADT does some twists and turns on his skateboard at the contest on Saturday. The competition took place on the main street in front of J&T Sports. The contest was interrupted by the parade but resumed shortly after.

FANCY FOOT WORK and balance were important for the Back to Acton skateboarding competition sponsored and organized by J&T Sports. Many students came out to try their hand at the sport.

TRACEY COLE is enjoying her ice cream even though more is on her than in her. Tracey is the daughter of Jim Cole, one of the skateboard judges.

Skateboard competition is hit at Acton Days

ISEE ya, Celia.

The Back to Acton Days skateboard competition attracted not only many of the younger set, who came out to test their skill of movement in the sport, but also many spectators Saturday morning.

The contest was organized and sponsored by J and T Sports who divided the contestants into two groups, junior and senior.

The seven competitors in the junior division each performed a one minute freestyle performance which they were marked on. Difficulty, fluidity and originality were the three marking areas.

The other half of the competition was the slalom race. Skateboarders had to maneuver around markers trying to make the best time.

Winner in the junior division and proud new owner of a skateboard from J and T Sports is Scott McDonough. Second place went to John McGrath.

In the senior division contestants were asked to perform the same type of skateboarding feats, but with a two minute freestyle routine. The six competitors in the seniors fought hard for the first place. Vince Lee came out on top with Steven Bigg placing second.

Judges for the contest were Sports store owner Terry Cole, brother Jim and Mark Vjejsky, a skateboarder from Toronto. Mark has performed his skateboard stunts on television and is a gymnast. He entertained Acton audiences between competitions.

Jeff Ogden was the only entrant in the under ten division and had to compete with the over tens. He was awarded a pair of Bauer shoes for his efforts.

Competing in the skateboarding contest were Scott McDonough, Tracey Parker, Helen Holland, Lynda Stachyra, John McGrath, Tim Holland, Jeff Ogden, Robert Padt, Steven Bigg, Rob Warrington, Wayne Hume, David Lawson and Vince Lee.

VINCE LEE took first place in the skateboarding contest on the weekend. The event was sponsored by J&T Sports and was one of many events happening on the weekend for Back to Acton Days.

MARK Vjejsky, one of the skateboard judges, does some fancy balance work during between competitions. Mark is a gymnast from Toronto and skateboard fan.
