CVCA to arbitration

A wage dispute between Credit Valley Conservation Authority and 10 of its workers is going to arbitration.
Thursday, it was revealed at an authority meeting Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 73 has demanded their contract go to arbitration.
Negotiations began last May between the union and CVCA management committee.
A five cent an hour increase is at stake.
The issue went to conciliation and the conciliation officer came up with a 25 cent hour pay boost but workers want 30 cents an hour, it was revealed at Thursday's meeting. So the issue goes to arbitration.

Workers now make $5.63 an hour, CVCA information officer Joan Rollings says. CVCA member Robert Harrison said the authority is prepared to negotiate but the union won't.
Following complaints and subsequent debate by member Laurie Mannell and others chairman Grant Clark noted the discussion was weakening the Authority's position.
Mannell wondered why a

Escarpment coalition expresses concern

Conservation groups and interested individuals have formed a coalition to urge the protection of the Niagara escarpment.
Lynn MacMillan of Don Mills, acting coordinator of the coalition, said support for the coalition appears to be tremendous and indicates the concern citizens across the province have about the quality of the future environment.
"While we recognize that the many legitimate concerns of landowners must be met, it is to be hoped that we will not lose sight of the basic objective of protecting the escarpment as a continuous natural environment."
At an initial meeting attended by escarpment landowners, representatives of conservation organizations and private citizens, the coalition endorsed a goal of long-term protection and planning of the Niagara Escarpment.
Among the groups active in the coalition are the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, Federation of Ontario Hiking Trail Associations, Pollution Probe and National and Provincial Parks Association of Canada.
The coalition invites other groups or individuals to join. Its address is 1262 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 76, Don Mills, Ont.

Police civy workers list beefs on boss

Civilian employees at the Halton Regional Police headquarters are writing a list of complaints against their new boss - after they threatened to walk out.
According to Halton Regional Police Association president Al Ruelens, who represents civilian and uniformed employees, he will look at the complaint list when he returns from holidays in mid-August.
The civilians' boss, administrator Ray Munro, said in a telephone interview yesterday: "I make no

Police-civy talks slow

Talks concerning a new contract between the Halton Regional Police and its civilian staff have started to drag, according to the negotiator for the civilians.
Halton Regional Police Association president Al Ruelens, the negotiator, said Thursday at Oakville the talks have run into some technical difficulties. He refused to go into details.
I issued a notice to all civilians today to say we would likely sign a new contract at the end of next month, Ruelens said.
He did say holidays by negotiators and questions of interpretation contributed to the slowdown.
Ruelens started a month's vacation Friday.
The association negotiates on behalf of about 60 civilian employees, including police cadets. The current contract runs out at the end of December.
