

WEE ANGELA YAWORSKY was a bit leary of the bridge in Chudleigh's apple orchard barn and decided to crawl across instead. Kent Stuckey tries to pass, but eventually decided against it. Angela and Kent were on a field trip from Honey Pot Nursery School last week.

HOLDING ON TIGHT TO the rope handrail, Scott Oliver from Honey Pot Nursery school walks across a bridge at Chudleigh's apple farm fun barn on Thursday.

A NICE COLD cup of apple cider quenched the thirst of Dean Wegman last Thursday after playing in the barn at Chudleigh's apple farm near Milton. Dean, along with several other students from Honey Pot Nursery school, enjoyed the outing with their teachers and some patient parents.

Chudleigh visit thrills youngsters

Taking 24 pre-schoolers led the two dozen to a quieter through Chudleigh's Apple area for a cup of apple cider.

The boys and girls were refreshments. from Honey Pot Nursery school and were making that school's annual trek to the popular orchards near Milton last Thursday morning. Teachers Gloria Tomlinson and Sue Adams aided by mothers Jo Marie McAfee, McCallum, Jeanette Muggridge, Rosemary Jeannine Burns and Marg

Oliver shepherded the excited youngsters in various cars and headed out.

They were met at the gate by a very capable guide, Marjorie, who was obviously used to such a siege of children. The children were led into a barn with a creative playground set up in one Ladders, slides, swinging bridges, tire swings and lots of straw kept the tots entertained. Any shyness or inhibitions were lost in the tangle of children. For a breather, Marjorie ride.

Farm is almost as difficult as The children sat on bales of straw while enjoying their However, somehow they managed to liven up the quiet corner. Wisely, Marjorie steered the 48 little hands away from the gift shop and all its breakable articles as she took them outside. Then, it was a walk through a real orchard and down the rows of trees.

Each boy and girl had a chance to pick an apple or two off the trees. However, it took some doing to keep the children within sight of teachers and parents, much less make them only pick from designated trees. When their bag was filled, they each got to pick an apple for themselves. This they did with seemingly greater enthusiasm.

For a while, as little mouths ate the big apples, it seemed as if the steady murmur of voices had died down. However, good things don't last forever. Marjorie announced there would be a hay

The little legs of the children walked a lot faster back to the barn than they had to get to the apples. On the return trip, they seemed to miss all the mud puddles formed by overnight rains, that had been impossible to miss previously. The hay ride was even more exciting than they had imagined. Holding back impulses to throw the hay in each other's faces, the youngsters did well not to give the driver a nervous breakdown.

All too soon, the tour was over, and Marjorie waved goodbye. For her, they were just a small group of youngsters out of hundreds of thousands a year. For the small group of children from Honey Pot nursery, it was a trip they won't forget.

Another class of 24 had gone earlier in the week and saw all the same sights. Mothers accompanying them were Joanna Avery, Karin Dawkins, Lesley Johnston, Lynne Wilson, Pearl Roberts and Jean Vaughan.

Still more children from Honey Pot visited Mount-

Mothers attending this field excursion were Diana Bailey, Lynda Derech, Brenda Noseworthy, Shelagh Wirth and Donna Yureck.

PICKING THE APPLES wasn't the best part of a Honey Pot Nursery school field trip to Chudleigh's apple farm. Eating the fruit was the most fun! Mark Hachey, looking straight at camera, and Michael MacArthur, right, and many of their classmates will certainly vouch for that. Accompanied by parents and teachers, the children visited the farm last Thursday.
