

Derek Hodgeson found himself having a busy week of hockey. Derek normally toils for Ed's-In-n-Out Midgets and between tournaments found time to fill in for the short staffed Sabres. Derek found the going a little tougher on the ice with the Sabres.

ALLAN DAWE

The height of incompetence?

Paul Salvibus and Neil Anderson were in the sinbin for Acton while Larry Melton and Andy Broadbent received Georgetown penalties. Both had been double minors. One would think if both teams had the same number of players in the penalty box they should have an equal number on the ice. Acton thought so and objected when they counted two too many gold and green sweaters on the ice.

Before Dawe could count to four, Greg Thompson fired a shot that found the corner over Kent Moffat's shoulder. The Sabres kept screaming the numbers but the goal stood and the Gemini won the contest 6-4.

That goal came with just under five minutes to play and it gave the Gems a two goal lead. I won't say Dawe's mistake cost Acton the game but with less than five minutes to go, down by one goal might give a team the incentive to net the equalizer. Down two is awful demoralizing.

Dawe is a big man and towers over all players when refereeing a hockey match. From his vantage point he should be able to see just about everything that is going on but I guess in Acton's little arena his sight must be blocked by the steel beams. It's not a good excuse but it parallels his officiating.

Oh, what the Sabres might give to have Bill Devorski every game.
