A targe number of children turned out to the Acton Public Library Friday morning to watch a puppet show put on by Rob Stutt of "Frogprint Theatre." Stutt entertained the Children from under a portable stage constructed to fit on his back. The production was sponsored by the Ministry of Culture and Recreation and the South-Central Regional Library System.

Pranks, parties, trip all part of bursary

In Ontario, the program was open to students who had completed grade 12. For those students who may plan to attend the course well as picnics, films. next year, here's what to and musicians. expect.

I arrived at the cegep "Bois-de-Boulogne" Montreal on July 2 and had my first taste of residence life. I stepped out of the elevator on the third floor and saw about 20 teenagers from across Canada clustered around a black and white T.V. set in the lounge. "Anyone know what time another world comes on?" This question was met with a sharp "En francais!" from my and occasionally, was when the six weeks (of monitor-guide. The T.V. was later fixed so that it couldn't be changed from a French station.

After the initial period orientation, the students became used to life in the residence. For me, this life meant many new experiences, such as co-ed washrooms and showers, fighting for an armchair in the salon, and an abrupt switch from English to French whenever a monitor entered the room.

Pranks were rampant in the residence; mattresses were stuffed into closets, doorknobs were greased, balloons filled with water were dropped or thrown from one balcony to another, and one student discovered his dresser drawer lined with plastic and filled with water. The drawer even housed a tiny "poisson-rouge" named

Raphael. Students were divided into classes according to their skill in oral French, and formal classes lasted three hours each morning, starting at nine.

In the afternoons, there were "ataliers", or workshops, in which the students studied Quebec dancing. macrame, theatre, video, cinema, or Quebec's culture. All activities were conducted in French.

College Bois-de-Boulogne also organized various activities for the evenings and weekends. These included a visit to the streets of Old Montreal to see the local talent, and visits to La Ronde, tan amusement park), Terre des Homthe Montreal Planetarium, a baseball game between the Expos and the Dodge's, and, as a finale, a trip 'o Quebec City.

I've made many new friends from across Canada and I highly recommend the summer bursary program to any students who want to improve their oral French. The hardest part of the course was saying goodbye

Ontario's annual fall fairs are a traditional meeting place for gourmets and bargain hunters. It's also a place where a little indulgence can lead to headaches after the fair is over.

"Every year our consumer services bureau receives a number of complaints from people who want to know why the merchant who sold them an item won't offer to exchange it for one of another color or give a refund," said consumer minister Frank Drea. "They believe the 48-hour cooling-off period which applies to door-to-door salesmen also applies to merchants who rent stalls at the fair-and that's just not true."

Door-to-door salespeople must agree to cancel any contract without charge if the contract was signed in the consumer's home and the request for rescission was made within 48 hours of signing the

Deer population growing, many killed on highways

The increased deer agricultural southern Ontario is the big factor in the growing number of deer being killed on Ontario highways.
