... Terry Mannell states

Angered at garbage plan result, Waste Committee chairman resigns

Stating the Regional Council commitment to new methods of garbage disposal is nothing more than a sham, Terry Mannell has resigned as chairman of the Solid Waste Management Committee.

The committee was formed in Jan., 1979, with a mandate to solve the problems of waste disposal in Halton Region with particular emphasis on resource recovery.

That committee spent, according to Mr. Mannell, more than $100,000 with $15,000 alone being used to pay Kilborn Limited to produce the Solid Waste Management System Study which was brought to council two weeks ago.

The study called for garbage separation in the home, a refuse-derived fuel plant, incineration plants in Milton and Georgetown, a steam plant for the Georgetown Hospital, and transfer stations where garbage could be centrally stored for transfer to landfill sites or the refuse fuel plant.

At the council meeting, Mr. Mannell could not be present, but the plea to put the first stages of the program into operation were turned down by a 13-5 vote as Councillors asked the system study go back to staff for cost implications.

At a press conference hurriedly called last Wednesday, Mr. Mannell said the refusal of council to go ahead with the Solid Waste Management System Study "had all the appearance of a continual delay and a lack of commitment from the beginning."

He said the plan had more than adequate escape and protection clauses built in so that there would be no cost to the region.

But by "refusing to accept an absolutely safe course of action," the Council had shown a "hypocritical response" with the result that "all promises ring very, very hollow."

While he will continue to serve as a regional councillor, Mr. Mannell said his days with the Solid Waste Management Committee are definitely over.

"I refuse to be used any longer. I will not be co-opted by a council which has misled the public claiming policy statements it now shows no commitment to; which has declared before the OMB and other public hearings, continuously that it is committed to resource recovery when it has no such conviction; which has found every excuse conceivable to delay a meaningful commitment and, now faced with a well-researched, carefully-prepared resolution that does represent a meaningful decision, but one so couched in safe-guards and escape clauses that it represents no risk at all, has further delayed," he said.

Mr. Mannell said the regional promise not to continue developing more and more landfill sites and a firm promise not to expand current dumps has now gone by the boards.

He told this newspaper current dumps are only good for another three years and it will probably take up to six years before Site F is operating. Even then Site F is only seen as accepting six million tons of garbage for a site life of only six years more. He intimated, therefore, the region if it sticks with landfill would probably be going for great enlargements at Oakville dump and probably Site F.

Mr. Mannell showed a sheaf of documents on solid waste handled by his committee which was about 1.5 feet deep, stating the only outcome of all the work would "be that these will probably find their way into a dark corner of Site F."

"Of particular disappointment to him was the 'apparent' rejection of source separation."

"It has been suggested that the idea of source separation is an excessive imposition on the people of the region."

"Yet they are the good folk who have looked to us continuously for leadership in finding an alternative to the use of valuable land for the disposal of a potential re-

"They are the same people, particularly in Burlington and Halton Hills, who have demonstrated their willingness to participate in experimental programs, and throughout the region, in volunteer efforts."

While the Council had agreed to moving ahead with transfer sites, Mr. Mannell found fault with that, stating it does not come near the program of steam production and resource recovery which would have made the transfer stations pay for themselves.

"All such a step would do is demonstrate to the citizens of Tremaine-Britannia our commitment to more efficient movement of the same (maximum) amount of garbage to their area," he said.
