In case a child does not receive his shot, which is free of charge, Mrs. Cable said that should be the mother's cue to take the child to the family doctor for the shots. Then let the school know.

Infants usually receive an initial series of shots plus two booster shots before they start going to school. The initial series normally takes place when the child is age two, four and six months. There is a booster shot at 11/2 years and another just before school starts.
