Parks Canada

Heritage holidays
from sea-to-sea. To explore.
To enjoy. To experience.

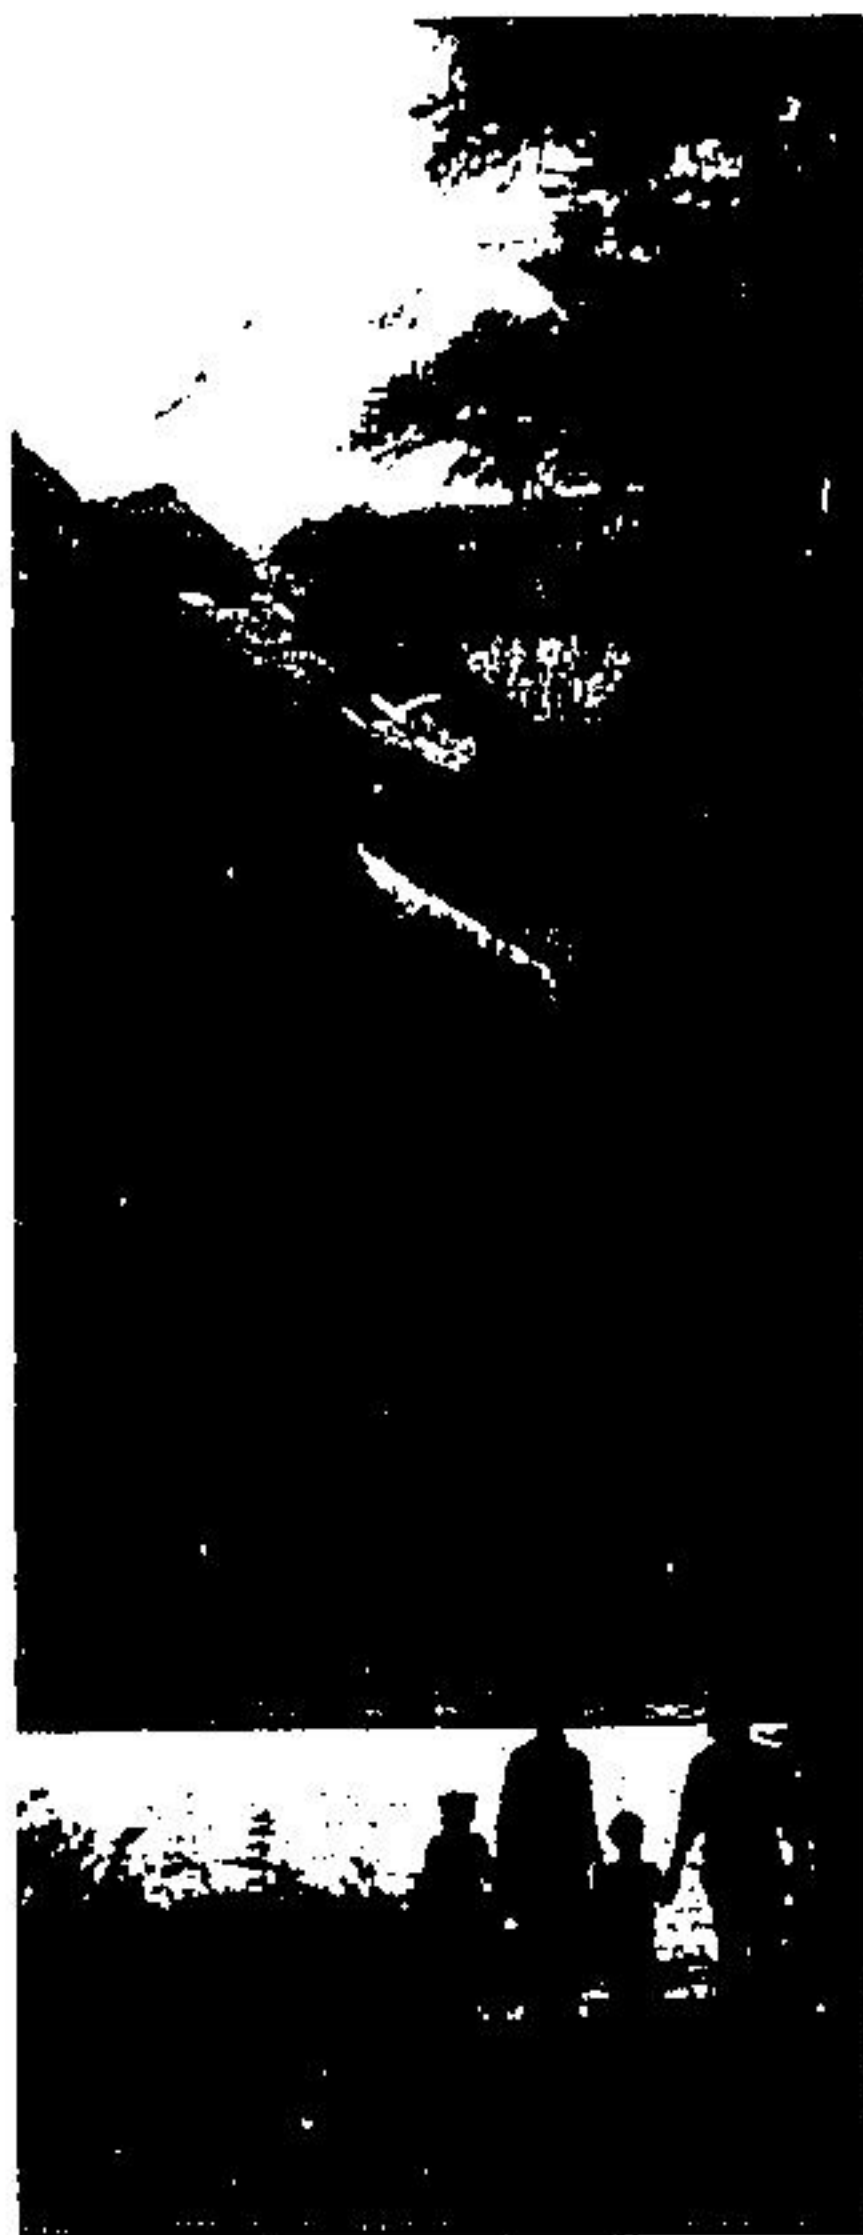

Canada's National Parks welcome you to explore your heritage. See Canada's most southern mainland point in Point Pelee National Park. Climb Canada's highest mountains in Kluane National Park. Stand on the high tide shores of Fundy National Park. Visit family or meet new friends in nearby cities and towns. Show your children part of Canada.

Canada's National Parks are for people who enjoy their country's natural heritage. People who care about their own roots and those of the country — its natural values. People who like to explore when they relax.

Bring your camera and take home some memories. There's swimming and fun in the sun to be found at fine beaches in Prince Edward Island, Gros Morne, Forillon, Point Pelee and Pacific Rim National Parks.

You can ride horseback through the mountains of Waterton Lakes and Yoho. Prince Albert, Riding Mountain, La Mauricie and Kejimikujik and other wilderness parks are great for canoeists.

There's excellent fishing in most national parks, especially Terra Nova, Fundy and Cape Breton Highlands. Every park has something unique to offer holiday hikers, photographers, bird watchers or nature lovers. Interpretive programs help you learn more about the parks.

There are 56 Historic Parks and Sites which commemorate people, places and events in our history. From the remnants of a 1,000-year old Viking settlement at L'Anse aux Meadows in Newfoundland to the silent gun batteries of Fort Rodd Hill on Vancouver Island, each one tells a story. Guides, interpretive programs, displays, buildings and audio-visual presentations bring the past vividly to mind. In Fortress Louisbourg and Lower Fort Garry, people in period costumes give you a glimpse of life in past centuries.

Heritage Canals provide cruising opportunities unrivalled anywhere in the world for their beauty and variety. The Trent-Severn Waterway between Lake Ontario and Georgian Bay; the Rideau Canal between Kingston and Ottawa; the Sault Ste. Marie Canal; Ottawa River Canals; Richelieu River Canals and St. Peters Canal on Cape Breton Island.

Agreements for Recreation and Conservation with the provinces bring Canadians into touch with the beauty of our land and the achievements of its founders.
