Ballinafad

Cemetery badly in need of repairs

Erin Township is bringing in a stone mason from Fergus to see what can be done about crumbling gravestones in the Ballinafad Cemetery. Councilor Jo Schneider raised the poor condition of the burial grounds on the Erin side of the hamlet at a recent meeting. She says some gravestones have been knocked down. Mrs. Schneider doesn't know if there has been malicious damage. Mrs. Schneider noted many of the gravestones are old and simply crumbling. The township has asked the advice of Bill Geiger of Geiger Monuments, Fergus, and expects to review his recommendations next month. Mrs. Schneider said she expects some of the gravestones, which are old and breaking apart, need to be drilled and then wired together. Other pillar type monuments have had pieces broken off or the whole pillar is broken off at the base. Some gravestones are cracked and split, others are leaning over and have sunk. A few other gravestones have become so weathered it is hard to read the names on them. The township took over the Ballinafad Cemetery from the local cemetery board a couple of years ago.

Erin Township has called in a stone mason to advise what can be done about crumbling and slaking tombstones at Ballinafad Cemetery.

Coles keep..

cerns about the corridor being 200 feet from his winter feedlot. Also he is concerned about stalle on his steel roofed barn. There are about 300 head of beef cattle on the Coles farm.

Another concern is the resale value of the farm. Some farms in the north part of the line have lost 15 to 30 per cent, according to Coles.

"We can lease this corridor back at $1 per acre," said Coles. "We'll try it this year and see."

When Ontario Hydro crews were installing the towers and line on the Coles farm, they first placed a mat over the soil to protect it from being churned up by machines and trucks.

Coles indicated he has not tried to work the soil or crop it yet. "They tried to be careful on impacting the soil," he said.

Ontario Hydro recently threw the switch on the new corridor. It transmits electricity from the Bruce Nuclear generator on Lake Huron to Milton. The distance is 109 miles.
