Happiness is covering your playground leader with paint. Children from the Robert Little and Centennial Music, Art and Drama playgrounds got together Friday at Prospect Park for a session of body painting.

Some merchants paid phony invoices

Some Acton merchants unwittingly paid invoices for a classified directory that were really solicitations. However, many more merchants spotted the invoices and threw them away according to Halton Regional Police. Staff Sergeant Ron Southgate said the invoices seem to have dried up. Halton Hills business were flooded with them in the last month and a half. This is typical of this gate noted, they flood the area for 30 to 45 days and then move on. After the invoices, which are infact solicitations, first appeared in Halton Hills police issued a warning about them and many merchants started throwing them out, some even contacting the police about them. Some merchants had already paid the invoices and informed police after they read the warning. Evidence and information has been turned over to the OPP Anti-Rackets squad but Southgate said sending out solicitations which have the appearance of invoices isn't an offense. All the police can do is caution merchants to watch for them.

Gymnastics week

The week of September 7 to 13 will be gymnastic week in Halton Hills. Halton Hills council proclaimed the week last Tuesday night, but will not pay for the publication of the proclamation. During that week the Halton Hills Jills Gymnastic Club will sell tags around town.
