"I'm extremely pleased to see the ministry allocate the funds," McCauley said. "I think it is due to the very strong efforts of the St. Joseph's Parents' Association and the board. I'm looking forward to working with the board on this project and getting construction started as soon as possible." Whelan credited Sherk and other board members and staff and Halton-Burlington MPP Julian Reed for helping the parents to pressure the ministry into allocating funds for Acton. He noted the province recently surveyed Ontario students on their view of their school and he thought St. Joseph's pupils helped by pointing out their lack of facilities. McCauley noted Bishop Paul Reding praised the efforts of the previous board and Acton parents to secure a new school for Acton at Monday's board inaugural meeting. McCauley said Bishop Reding told the new board the community is concerned about Catholic education and worked very hard. Bishop Reding also sald it is evident the board is concerned about the smaller communities in Hal-Since June, when they were stunned by the province's decision to grant funds for a new separate school in Oakville while they had thought they were the top priority for funding, parent spokesmen Whe-lan and Mike McMahon have taken their case to trustees, Bishop Reding and, in conjunction with the board, to Education Minister Bette Stephenson. There was also a special day of prayer for a new

The results of judging will be published in The Acton Free Press Christmas issue. Coats is hoping to line up more prizes, right now there is just prizes for first, second and third places in the contest. First prize is an Actario tickel donated by the Acton Business Improvement Area. A generous citizen who is backing ABC has donated the second prize $25, and Ed Wood of Family

Cleaners is donating cleaning vouchers for third "We hope this will become an annual event and we can expand our horizons to include the area surrounding Acton. In the future we also hope to promote a commercial and industrial contest as well. Acton is a great little town, as we all know, but let's make it a little nicer this Christmas with many, many welcoming doors at Christmas" Costs urged.

Tennant honored . . .

Works superintendent Frank Morette presented Sam's wife Lila with roses and CUPE Local 73 president Keith Smiley gave him a gold watch. Pomeroy presented Tennant with a cheque and a pen set while his fellow workers and guests at the dinner gave him a wallet and $150.

Recalling his early years with the Acton works department, Sam noted back in 1953 there were only five or six men working for Acton and they took care of the sewers and water, plowed the roads in winter, maintained and repaired the roads, put up traffic signs and handled dozens of other chores. When Halton Hills was born in 1974 he started work with the amalgamated municipality and unlike many Actonians Sam doesn't think Halton Hills has been all bad. He looks around town at many works projects carried out in recent years, concludes old Acton couldn't have afforded them, and decides Halton Hills has been pretty good for Acton. A bit of humor about Tennant's days with the Acton works force was recalled several times during the evening. Somehow Sam's driveway and the driveways of many other residents he knew were mysteriously plowed out after snow storms. He has a simple solution to the mystery. As a volunteer firefighter he was on call at all times so

He used to catch the dickens from his superiors about plowing out his driveway and the driveways of many of his friends, but that never stopped Sam. Tennant noted he couldn't see the sense in plugging someone's driveway when It would be just as easy to clean it out and take the snow away.

In the old Acton days if he needed materials for a job, Tennant recalled, he'd just go to the store, pay for them and turn in the bill. This habit caused him a few problems when he joined larger, and seemingly more sophisticated Halton Hills. With Halton Hills he used to give Morette fits going out and buying needed materials, signing for them and then letting the town walt for the bills to come in. But the job always got done, and done properly. For the past four years Sam has been devote to this chore now that he is re-However, until spring arrives and he can start his Legion gardening, he's keeping busy remodelling the interior good and expects to have more time to of his home. After that's done he's not sure what he'll do, maybe just putter around town. Sam figures he'll either have to change or find lots of things to do. He's still getting up at 5:45 a.m. and "can't all down. I never have been able to just sit around. Maybe I can get used to a slower pace." He loved his work with Acton and Halton Hills, made many wonderful friends and enjoyed working with his different bosses over the years. What he really enjoyed about being with the works department was the variety of jobs he got to do." One day I'd be doing some carpentry work, the next I'd be cutting grass or something in the parks and cemetery, another day it would be putting up stop signs, and the next day I'd be on the snow plow. I never had to do the same job two days in a row."
