Monte Carlo night smashing success

merce's first Monte Carlo Discount off Dry-cleaning-Acton Georgetown; night was a smashing success.

The event, staged at Acton Community Centre Friday night in aid of Leathertown, drew a large crowd.

No final figures are in yet, but Chamber president John Allinson Discount off Dry-cleaning-Acton estimated a crowd of over Family Cleaners-Les Pellis, Ac-500 people. The blackjack tables were jammed all night fortune were idle frequently. Allinson said next year the Chamber would only have a few wheels and many more blackjack tables. There were both hired professional dealers and trained Chamber dealers.

"People all thought it was a real class deal," he declared, adding the only adverse comments they heard was about the chill in the rink.

The buffet, open all night, was popular, as was the bar, Around 10 p.m. 500 more slices of meat had to be brought in for the buffet. Many people thought it was "super" having the buffet open all night.

"There are a few things year," he concluded.

committee recently received a report from public health inspector Neil Pattullo regarding Jeanettes Home for Senior Citizens, but found there was nothing to be concerned about. The report was requested by committee after Katherine Kelly, who holds the mortgage on Jeanettes, expressed concerns about too many beds and fire dangers in the facility. Acton's regional councillor Dave Whiting noted committee ob-

Jeanettes is licenced under provincial Homes for Special regulations. In March there were 36 residents; 11 were homes for special care patients, six were private residents, four were patients subsidized by Wellington County and 11 by Halton under a purchase of service agreement.

Community Services Centre doesn't need to change name

Halton Region doesn't want the Acton Community Services Centre to change its name.

Earlier this year the centre's board received a letter from the region asking if they'd consider a name change to reflect its regional funding. Acton's councillor Dave Whiting raised the issue last week at health and social services committee and said afterwards the letter sent to the centre's board was "unfortunately worded."

He said the region doesn't want the centre's name changed and the fact "the local paper reported they received their grant is sufficient" recognition of region financing.

Some agencies receiving regional funding were asked to change their name, but Acton Site plan approval

Site plan approval for a three bay car wash at the Queen St. Achilles Motors and BP Service station operation owned by Les Pelittis has been given by Halton Hills. Previously site plan approval was given for the project, but it had to be revised following the granting of two minor variances on setbacks by Halton Hills Committee of Adjustment.

agencies the region wanted to adopt a reglonal name and look. He noted councillors hoped to see, for example, the North Halton, Oakville and Burlington associations for the mentally retarded to amalgamate under a Hulton umbrella reduce costs. However, there was no such aim with the Acton centre because it is "unique" in Halton. The region had trouble "wording" the letter to the centre's board. "The wording was inapproPrinte." Centre co-ordinator

Peggie Balkind said the board sent a letter to the GOING ON VACATION?
