

Deer hunt decision goes back to committee

Debbie Kilmer and Pauline Martland show a sign riddled by shot, which they maintain illustrates the disrespect some hunters have for private property and those living on it.

Another Halton three-day deer hunt will not be approved until it has been discussed again by the Regional Planning and Public Works Committee.

A recommendation from the committee that the Ministry of Natural Resources be informed Halton has "no objection" to another hunt was turned down after two Limehouse-area residents asked Regional Councillors for two weeks in which to prepare reasons why a hunt should not be held.

To solidify their argument, Mrs. Debbie Kilmer and Mrs. Pauline Martland showed regional councillors a "No Hunting or Trespassing" sign which someone had used for target practice.

Presenting the bulk of the submission, Mrs. Kilmer said she had done some preliminary checking, but said with only one week in which to work, she would like the council to hold off any final decision until more evidence could be gathered.

Mrs. Kilmer, whose husband is a veterinarian, said she had personally seen the result of indiscriminate

Antiques missing

Halton Regional Police are investigating a break and enter at the fire-guzzled Brookville General Store on Guelph Line.

According to police, thieves apparently looking for antiques made off with two hand saws, two hammers and a large iron pot sometime last Wednesday.

The goods valued at $150 were taken when thieves gained entry to the boarded up building.

A fire of an unknown origin caused an estimated $50,000 damage more than a month ago.

hunting near her home. She said her husband is "trying to piece together" a deer which had "part of its face blown off" and had crawled to a home to die.

In her submission, Mrs. Kilmer said a Ministry spokesperson, Nancy Tilt, had said "there is no accurate estimate of the numbers of deer on and around the Niagara Escarpment. From the numbers killed on the road (75 to 100 in 1960 to about 350 in 1976), Mrs. Kilmer said the number of deer was being estimated from the number killed, therefore the Ministry conception of the deer herds had grown out of proportion.

She said that while the Ministry controlled the hunt last year with surveillance and licensing, there was no test of marksmanship. She mentioned the deer her husband had found.

Mrs. Kilmer said all discussion had centred on Henry Stanley, Halton Ag Rep., and apple grower Tom Chudley of Milton. She said they had said there was a problem but no other groups had put in submissions to the contrary.

She said that should the council decide to go ahead with the deer hunt, she was prepared to start a petition to have it stopped.

What she said she wanted was "at least two weeks to review the decision."

Mr. Martland said she had been walking through the woods near her home and found a camouflaged hunter sitting up in a tree with a crossbow. This was at the end of November, long after the Ministry deer hunt concluded Nov. 5.

She also had a number of letters of support asking for the deer hunt not to be allowed to continue in 1981.

Okville Councillor Terry Mannell, who had tried to have the decision put off during the committee meeting two weeks ago, said he thought it would be wise to have Mr. Stanley at a discussion along with residents, also a representative of the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Mr. Mannell said he did not think the Ministry was worried so much about controlling deer as "just to have a hunt."

He said "the mandate of the Ministry is to increase recreational activities in the province."

But Milton Councillor Brad Clements, a member of the Halton Agricultural Advisory Committee, said the hunt had been held almost six months ago and those opposed to another hunt should have made their feelings known prior to the regular council meeting where the committee recommendation was being discussed.

Mr. Clements, noting the Ministry had reported 800 deer shot last year by poachers, said one of the main reasons to have another controlled deer hunt is to stop "illegal hunting."

Fellow Milton Councillor Bill Johnson opposed this view, stating he had been on record as opposed to a "blunderbuss type of hunt."

He said the Ministry concept is "the most inefficient way of thinning out the deer."

Mr. Johnson said the best method would be to have experienced hunters stationed "where the deer go for sustenance" such as apple orchards and streams. He said a small group of good hunters in a longer time frame could do the job of thinning the deer and not be found wandering on private property.
