Whiting says Region might supply town mosquito spray

There is a chance there may be some mosquito spraying done in Acton this year.

Regional councillor Dave Whiting said he has been talking to regional Medical Officer of Health Dr. Peter Cole about the region supplying the town with spray and Halton Hills works staff doing the spraying.

The region will be testing for the mosquito larva which spreads encephalitis but it isn't common in this area of Ontario so its unlikely any evidence of it will be found.

However, a lot of mosquitos is a "nuisance factor" and thus can be considered a "health hazard", Whiting says he learned from talking to Dr. Cole.

If the region gets a supply of spray it could be turned over to Halton Hills free of charge with the town footing the bill for the labor of spraying, Whiting said.

Nothing is certain yet and he plans to continue looking into the matter.

Last year over 700 residents signed petitions and a delegation went to Halton Hills council seeking a spraying program. Council agreed to consider placing a mosquito spraying program for Acton in this year's budget, but it was chopped.

The town estimated a program would cost $7,750.

Christine Houston, Church Hill Rd. North, who led the fight for a spraying program last year had been considering going to council to protest the decision to drop it from the budget this year.

However, after discussing the issue with local councillors she has decided there is no chance the town will spend the money on a spraying program this year and besides she thinks it is too late now to start spraying. She is waiting to see if others who are in support of spraying will protest the program being trimmed from the budget.

Councillor Terry Grubbe said she has received a few calls from residents urging there not be a spraying program.

Cook Margot Bollert served up many a hamburger during the Acton Tennis Club's first barbecue which coincided with the season's opening games Sunday.
