Firefighter honored . . .

(Continued from page 1) major Canadian city practically deserted. After several hours in Mississauga, Reg headed back to Malton to work another regular shift. He got home Monday morning.

The small medal received last week is indeed an honor for all the firefighters. A small certificate accompanying it reads: "In recognition of their outstanding courage and devotion to duty, the Advisory Council voted, unanimously to make this special award of the Ontario Medal for Firefighters Bravery to the members of The Mississauga Fire Department."

"In the opinion of the Council and the Government of Ontario your skillful and dedicated performance in the face of extreme personal danger at the train derailment and fire in Mississauga on November 10, 1979 prevented a disaster of major proportions. For eleven days and nights you fought a fire that, had it not been controlled, would have imperiled the lives and health of thousands of our citizens. "Your courage and determination under such hazardous conditions have earned you the respect and admiration of your peers and the Government and people of Ontario will be forever in your debt."

It's signed by Premier William Davis, October 27, 1980.

In the 13 years he has been in the department Reg says the derailment was not the worst disaster he has had to contend with. He was on duty the night the Gulf oil refinery blew up in Port Credit, and was also at the scene of the DC-9 crash in Woodbridge. He feels these two were much worse because of the loss of life.

But he and his fellow firefighters will continue to do their job with no forethought as to medals or commendation. Their jobs are to put out fires and save lives. What recognition they get above that is gravy.
