

The last thing this country needs is just another wood stain. Introducing Cuprinol

Cuprinol was invented over 60 years ago by a Danish scientist of Copenhagen. Convinced of the advantages of copper as a fungicide, he developed a process to dissolve copper salts with spirit solvents creating a preservative insoluble in water. Based on this process, preservatives under the name Cuprinol were first marketed in Europe in 1912.

Cuprinol is now part of Hoechst, one of the world's largest chemical companies. Cuprinol manufactures products not only for the consumer, but for world-wide industrial and technical markets. The brand leader for the United Kingdom, Cuprinol is now sold in over 40 countries. With 60 years of dependability and excellent winter protection behind the name Cuprinol, our products are bound to have popularity in Canada.

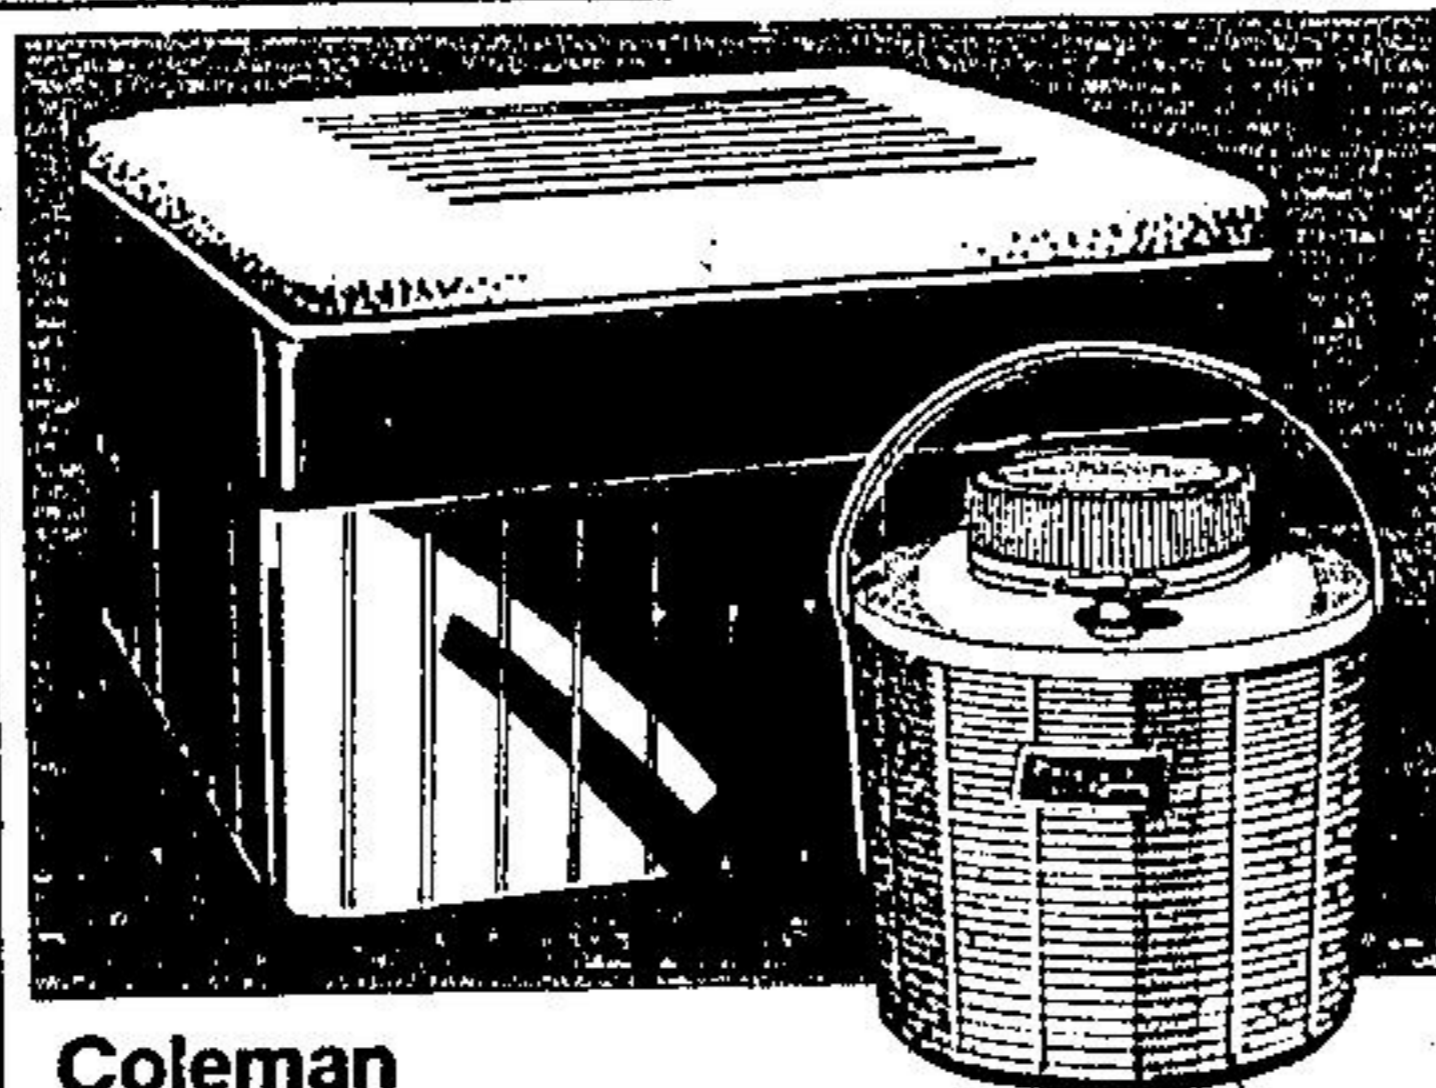

Cuprinol Transcolor is not just another wood stain. Transcolor is not just another pretty face. Transcolor protects the surface of the wood and more important it penetrates deeply to preserve the wood against harmful insects, wood worm and even wet and dry rot. Transcolor's long lasting resins make water beadup, protecting wood from rain, ice and snow. Once applied, Cuprinol Transcolor will not form a surface film, that can crack or peel.
