Corn crop whopper but prices slump

By Jane Miller

Wet, dull and chilly weather has taken its toll with a number of farm crops this year but corn growers have been so successful they will likely be selling corn at a break-even price.

The corn harvest got off to an early start and yields for both silo corn and grain corn are high in this area and through to the midwestern United States, according to Doug Miller of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

"The biggest problem with the market is, the prices are low. It is down to about $8 a ton and varies from day to day," Mr. Miller said.

Normally grain corn sells for $110 per ton. Some Halton farmers will sell some corn at these current low prices to pay off outstanding loans and store the rest in hopes of prices increases, explained Mr. Miller.

A hot summer has led to early maturing, harvesting and consequent storing which can be costly. Farmers holding back their corn are expecting prices to rise nine cents per bushel a month. At 40 bushels per ton, the increase would equal $3.60 a ton.

At that rate it would take several months for corn prices to advance to the accepted price.

Much of the corn grown locally is used to feed livestock, while some is sold as a cash crop. St. Lawrence Corn Starch also provides a local market for this hardy crop.

Although corn growers will not be getting the price they want for their harvest, they are more fortunate than their counterparts producing other crops.

Second and third hay cuttings were poor and some crops were lost because of the wet months of August and September.

Despite the loss of about 10 per cent of wheat, oats and barley crops attributed to excess rain, Mr. Miller said there was still a higher than normal yield.

Commenting on the local apple crops, Burke McNeill, also with the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, reports yields have been slashed by 40 per cent, compared to last year.

Mr. McNeill adds however last year's yield was exceptionally high, so a comparison of this year and last year isn't quite accurate.

He predicts the final apple yield will only be a little below normal.

The bitter cold of last winter has affected many fruit crops as has spring frost and pollenization problems during blossom time.

Rain has not harmed local fruit crops but the dull, cool weather which accompanies it has.

September weather has meant for slow ripening. Farmers are not pleased with the McIntosh apple color, for example, even though there is nothing wrong with the fruit itself.

Mr. McNeill reports strawberry and raspberry yields were good this year as those crops ripened during appropriate weather conditions. The cherry crop was virtually wiped out by spring frost and what little peaches are grown in the area were also lost.

Sweet corn was the only vegetable crop to fare well this season. The wet summer had an adverse effect on most other varieties.

Ontario Liberals oppose province purchase of Suncor

Editor's Note: The following statement, issued by Halton-Burlington MPP Julian Reed, the Liberal energy critic and David Petersen, London Centre MPP and financial critic, was filed with this newspaper for publication.

The Liberal Caucus opposes Ontario's acquisition of 25 per cent of Suncor, as a gross misuse of taxpayers' money. Moreover, the purchase raises some serious questions about the way our province is being run. It will be of little benefit to Ontarians and, given our current enormous provincial budgetary deficit, will probably dearly handicap any efforts to stimulate Ontario's economy.

Premier Bill Davis has given four reasons for the purchase: A—to assist Canadianization of the petroleum industry; B—to provide for security of supply; C—to have "a window" on the industry; and D—as a sound investment for Ontario taxpayers.

Surely Canadianization is best accomplished through such comprehensive federal initiatives as PetroCan, and through private ownership under the national energy program.

As to security of supply, the truth of the matter is that Ottawa has sole authority for determining oil allocations and Ontario will have virtually nothing whatever to say about delivery or distribution of Suncor's oil. Moreover, the minister of energy was unable to explain in response to a question in the house on Oct. 20, just how the Suncor deal would ensure security of supply.

The rationale of obtaining a "window" on the petroleum industry is sheer nonsense. Already the federal government has such a window in PetroCan—and information on the internal workings of the oil industry is obtainable by means of a simple phone call to Ottawa.

As an investment for Ontario taxpayers the purchase is questionable to say the least. Several major Canadian enterprises have rejected the idea of investing in Suncor stock; the true value of the company is unclear since its shares are not on the open market; and over the last four years Suncor has been divesting itself of holdings which would indicate a reduction in reserves.

Why has the Premier insisted on risking taxpayers' money in this ill-advised fashion? Why will he not make public a forecast of future benefits and earnings? Why has he failed to supply the compendium of information which opposition members have demanded—data which would permit public scrutiny of the transaction? Why has he disregarded the advice of his own provincial treasurer who was against the purchase, as were several other cabinet ministers?

Of course it's easy to understand the treasurer's concern about a purchase which is questionable from a business point of view and will increase his budgetary deficit to a staggering $1.3 billion, thus postponing his stated objectives of balancing the budget—almost indefinitely.

In this connection one more question remains to be answered. Who is managing the financial affairs of Ontario—the treasurer, as is his right and obligation; or the Premier?

The sad truth is, the $650,000,000 being spent on Suncor will not create one single new job in Ontario and will result in capital outflow to the United States. This money should have been spent on creating new jobs for Ontarians by producing energy supplies, using Ontario resources—by significantly improving our economy, rather than bleeding it of vital capital.

Had the $650,000,000 been invested in fuel alcohol plants six, 1,000 tonne a day plants could have been constructed with the capacity of producing 430,000,000 gallons of fuel alcohol a year. By 1990 these plants could have replaced 15 per cent of Ontario's gasoline requirements. In addition such a project would have created nearly 7,000 direct and continuous jobs as well as more than 1,000 jobs during construction.

Such a venture would have secured these fuel supplies for the province, would have kept the capital in Ontario, would have created badly needed jobs and would have helped to revitalize our provincial economy.

The Premier's so-called reasons for purchasing 25 per cent of Suncor are simply not valid and the purchase is clearly a mistake—one for which the people of Ontario will pay dearly and for a long time to come.

Recommendation Approve 18 estate lots at 5th Line

An 18 estate lot subdivision at the Fifth Line and Highway 7 was recommended for approval by Halton Hills council, Monday night, with Councillors Pam Sheldon, George Malby and Marilyn Serjeantson opposed.

The proposal by Almond Investments Ltd. was originally put forward more than three years ago, when received and a public meeting held in June, 1980.

The lots have been reduced from 20 to 18, and are located on the section of land where the soil is not suitable for farming a 45 acre parcel of better agricultural soil will be retained for farming purposes.

The company, after a study based on the Agricultural Code of Practice, came up with a plan where the lots lie outside the required separation distance of homes and a farm operation.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Food has agreed the revised plan is an improvement but still maintains it is an intrusion into an agricultural area.

Mayor Pete Pomeroy pointed out the matter would have to be decided at the Region "If the Region is still concerned when it knows the municipality is in favor the questions will have to be asked at the regional planning committee." The mayor said he likes this plan and pointed out it is much better than an earlier one.

Councillor Pam Sheldon contended the agricultural problems have not been satisfactorily resolved, and said she felt the location was wrong for this type of development.
