Reed wants peat fuel developed

"The Ontarlo Government should begin, immediately, construction of a pilot plant to produce methanol from peat," says Liberal Energy Critic, Julian Reed.

Pointing to a government report released Monday, October 26th, 1981, which pegs Ontario's energy potential from peat at an oil equivalent value of 72 billion barrels, Reed insisted that the government keep its promise to develop indigenous Ontario fuel resources.

"The first peat mine in Canada is being developed in Newfoundland," said Reed, "The first peat electric plant in Quebec; the first peat furnaces project in Saskatchewan. Each of these projects is being funded by the Canada Bilateral Agreement for Alternate Energy," he continued. Reed pointed out that Ontario's share of the five-year fund, established in 1978, is $58 million.

Although there has been much adverse publicity about a deer hunt in Halton, the Cambridge office of the Ministry of Natural Resources reports there was only one complaint of trespass in the region during the four day hunt, and it was settled without charges being laid.

Ministry biologists Nancy Tilt said 171 animals were bagged during the hunt across Hamilton-Wentworth, Brant, Wellington and Halton Regions. Last year hunters took 128 deer over a three day season. The extra day accounted for the bigger bag, Tilt says.

Halton hunters bagged 72 of the deer which the ministry said were healthy. Weights and checks of belly of deer.

thickness at check points indicated the deer were in good shape to face the winter months.

Further date on the hunt will not be available until the spring when the ministry conducts a population survey of the herds. Halton farmers, plagued by deer consuming their crops, won't know until next year whether the deer harvest will alleviate crop damage.

Anti-hunting groups have maintained the ministry's arguments for holding the hunt annually are unscientific and statistics on the number of deer are fictional. The ministry, in turn, argued the population must be reduced to stop crop damage from the animals and to cut down the road toll
