Feds preach restraint but don't practise it greedy and chastized these preaching. They really want days?

Last week was the week for economic lectures.

And they sounded hallow indeed.

First, the Prime Minister informed us it was our fault, not his, that inflation is spiralling upwards and interest rates are so high. Presumably since those two economic ills are our fault and not the government's the deepening recession can also be blamed on all Canadians.

Then Gerald Bouey, Governor of the Bank of Canada which weekly sets the trend setting prime interest rate, went to Montreal to lecture us on not asking for large pay demands to keep up with inflation, in effect to lose ground and purchasing power.

Now, we believe in restraint. While we don't like recessions and high unemployment any better than anyone else, we figure until the deficit and government spending are slashed down to an affordable level we aren't going to solve the underlying ills of our economy and will continually suffer soaring inflation, high interest rates and intolerably high unemployment in various degrees. We do support the notion of short term economic pain for longer term gain, but only if economic measures are fair to all.

For these reasons we did see some positive aspects to the recent federal budget, despite the fact it spelled relief for few and disaster for many.

Well, are you feeling properly ment doesn't believe what it is sacrifice from only the lower and middle income groups, despite the fact they closed loop-holes in the tax system of which the more affluent were taking advantage. Obviously small business, the laborers, farmers, middle income white collar workers etc., are supposed to shoulder the entire load.

Earlier this year MPs voted themselves a staggering pay hike. True they hadn't had a raise for several years and their total raise worked out to about six per cent per year since their last pay boost. However, we don't think they were suffering all that much and could have made do with a much more "moderate" (that's Bouey's word) pay boost.

But the real insult was the news just a few days after his Montreal lecture that Bouey himself had received a $9,500 a year raise, retroactive to April l, which gives him a total annual pay of $104,500.

If the man really believed Canadians should be seeking 'moderate' pay increases he'd demand his hike be applied to the deficit, granted that would be like a drop of rain going into Lake Ontario, but it would be a symbolic gesture to the rest of

While it may be an extremely simplistic view of what Bouey does, many Canadians must also be wondering how a man who has done nothing more in the public view with the interest rates than follow the Americans up and down the scale can be worth over $90,000 But, obviously the govern- a year, before his recent raise.

Acton Chamber of Commerce is on its way to an excellent membership for the 1962 season. Already they have 60 paid up, six of which are new members. The new ones are Haefner Siding, Jug City, Invirosearch Ltd., Dr. Richard Jozwick, Country Gentleman and R. Connor Haulage.

The Chamber is giving out gentle reminders of 1981 members to renew their membership.

Then a quick trip home to get the backup revealed it too was dead, but we didn't know that until we were in Brookville. We made do with what little power we had then headed back home to pick up the first flash which was anything else. Those days of course only come about twice a year-and that's twice too often. In spite of everything going wrong, Darlene said she learned a lot about how to compromise when taking a picture. She learned from a pro. These walksbouts are great for the student. If a student is really serious about his or her future, experience gained during a serious walkabout can save years of time, and maybe even schooling, if they find out the job isn't all they thought it was.

Objects to "tasteless" photograph of deer hunt

Dear Sir: This letter is in regard to a photograph appearing on the front page of the Acton Free Press, dated November 11, 1981.

receiving the Acton Free Press in the mail. It keeps me up to date on the major occurrences in and around Acton. After having to live in a relatively largely populated city for a few years, it is nice to be reminded of the values of a small town as displayed through your newspaper.

Unfortunately, this changed the moment I picked the issue of November 11. It was more than appalling to see the unnecessary display of the slaughter of six deer killed by several area hunters. There was quite a controversy over the fact that there was to be another deer hunt this year. In fact your newspaper even printed a ballot citizens could complete to protest the hunt. Yet despite this, after the event occurred, your paper published a very descriptive photograph. Is this really in the best interests of the community? I am not disputing the fact that this legislated hunt was necessary. I do realize there was a slight overpopulation of deer this year. I have driven along Highway 7 and have been lucky to avoid hitting a deer which darted out in front of the car I was driving, as has my sister when she drove along the same road. What I am questioning, is your editorial discretion, or rather lack thereof, in allowing such a tasteless display of an obvious disrespect for nature. I cannot believe that the value system of a town so closely related to both agriculture and wildlife would support this type of Each week I look forward to journalism. I had not expected this sort of minor sensationalism from your paper and I shall certainly be much more wary and critical of your paper and much less willing to take valuable time to read the Acton Free Press.

Yours truly, Eunice Gibb.

Editor's Note: The writer is correct when she notes this paper carried ballots for people to voice objection to the deer hunt. However, she neglects to mention this paper also carried ballots for people wishing to support the hunt. We also published numerous letters both pro and con on the hunt.

We would suggest that not to carry a photograph of hunters with wild deer would have been censorable of the news, news isn't always pleasant, even in a small town. It is in the best interests of the community to unblasedly report the news. The Free Press saw good points made by people on both sides of the deer hunt controversy and decided to remain neutral both on the editorial page and of course in the news columns. We heard from readers both for and against the deer hunt photograph, we suggest that the photograph achieved its desired affect; it reported news and produced reactions among

Good books on outdoor sports are usually much appreciated, the little shop in Acton Mews is usually well stocked. Late fall splake fishing has just

As cynical as I am about poor service in large stores around Christmas when clerks have no idea what they are selling, I have just found out that Christmas has another, and better side. I had on the past weekend the opportunity, to take in a Christmas play at the Evangel Tabernacle Pentecostal Assembly here in Acton. It was a wonderful Christmas play, with a cast of over 100 children, very good costumes, exceptionally well versed performers and a very direct Christmas message, it was obvious the teachers and others had put in a lot of hours of hard work at many rehearsals. Special credit should go to Pat Lee of Acton, Betty Phillips of Rockwood and Yvonne Daws of Guelph for a program like this which makes one appreciate the wonderful world we live in . Remember, Acton needs you, shop locally.
