We need to recognize what can disrupt our contentment and breed discontent in us. Only in this way can we find the ction. Someone can be 'great gain' temporarily satisfied describes. One mediate source of the pervading to be dissatisfied with who we are and what we have life, an inward attitude, by advertising that proaches while mere satisfaction depends on external courage a worship of the young, the beautiful and the expensive. The foolishness of such idols should be obvious, but so many of us are capare encouraged content and satisfied forever-at least until the "new Improved" concern for our own confuse the scriptural When the Apostle concept of contentment Paul exhorted the Church at Rome to refuse to let their minds be "poured into this world's mold," he was writing a serious admonition that seems day as well. Paul writes, "Let your life befree from the love of money, being content with what you have; for God Hirnself has sald, "I will never desert you, nor will I ever forsake you." Another source of discontent is our own sin. It produces many forms of discontent: envy, avarice, pride and selfish ambition. These all flourish when they are allowed to grow in a continual environment of anxiety (Matthew 6:25, 34). The "grass is greener" syndrome is the classic symptom of the person who has never learned contentment. In an address by the Rev. Bob because Mumford, he points out moderates to us that the call of God our desires. God is draws us to focus on glorified when we are others rather than on nor ourselves or what we victims of a "poverty Godliness have or don't have.
