

Meanderings

By Mabel Barkman
It will soon be Thanksgiving Day and many people will buy turkeys to roast. So many housewives complain that when the turkey is cooked the breast meat is very dry.

I am not fond of the self-basted turkeys but I think there is a good way of making tender breast meat. Just carefully separate the skin from the white meat and insert thin slices of cold butter. Work it up carefully all over the breast and then stuff the turkey and sew up the skin.

When the turkey is cooked, I think you will find that the white meat is baked, I think you will find that the white meat is deliciously tender.
