Acton's clergy serves up lunch

Last Wednesday's Acton Clergy Association sponsored luncheon was the first of a series of monthly lunches, all held at the Acton Baptist Church beginning at noon. St. Alban's Anglican Church's Rev. Art Tribe was guest speaker last week, with Pastor John Cooper, Bethel Christian Reformed Church speaker at the next gathering on November 3. Rev. Cliff Hodgson, Evangel Pentecostal will speak December 1, and St. Joseph's Father Ralph Diodati on January 5. February 2, Acton Baptist Pastor Jean Stairs will speak and Envoy Doug Vale of the Salvation Army will give the address on March 2. Andy King of Trinity United Church will speak April 6.

Mrs. Pastor John Cooper and Lil Wagner helped out at the clergy Association luncheon last week.

St. Alban's Anglican Church minister Art Tribe poured the coffee.

Jean Stairs, of Acton Baptist Church took a breather from her waitressing duties and enjoyed some lunch herself.

Rev. C. Hodgson, of the Evangel Pentecostal Church, dished out the soup.

Andy King, of Trinity United Church, was turned into a waiter for the day.

Bonnette seeks seat

Rick Bonnette, 37, has tossed his hat in the ring for the race for one of the two Acton area council seats.

A lifelong resident, Bonnette, owns and operates Acton Travel. Other candidates for the two seats on Halton Hills council are Bruce Cargill, Ross Knechtel and Esther Taylor.

Bonnette wants to bring local government back to Acton and if elected plans to attend meetings of local service clubs and organizations regularly to feel the pulse of the community.

He thinks leadership in government spending restraint must come from the council since the federal and provincial governments aren't following what they preach. Halton Hills is a multi-million dollar business which hasn't been operating that long and he feels it's time an efficiency expert was brought in to evaluate the operation and uncover waste. He also plans to speak out on recreation and policing concerns during the campaign.

Whelan vies for region

Vince Whelan, Gould Crt. is challenging incumbent Dave Whiting, and candidate Ed Wood for Acton's only seat at regional council.

Whelan announced his intention to run in the November 8 election yesterday (Tuesday). The manager of a Mississauga branch of the Toronto Dominion Bank, Whelan says he feels he is a "viable alternative to the existing candidates."

He continued, "I believe the citizens of Acton both need and deserve a strong voice on regional government. With the economic and social problems currently facing us, and which we will continue to face on into the 80s, we need a representative who will aggressively approach these problems and find a solution. I feel my business background and community experience would be a definite asset in both these areas."

Whelan is a past president of the Acton Lions club, and is the founding Grand Knight of the local Knights of

A Lino Print Workshop will be held at Acton Library on Saturday October 16 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. This workshop with Avril Bull is for adults only and the fee for the day is $4. There is a limit of 15 participants.

Hall-Marininos are held over for trial

Dave Hall and Nick Marininos have been bound over for trial on charges stemming from the theft of leather skins at Beardmore tannery last year.

Hall has been charged with theft over $200 and conspiracy to commit theft. Marininos has been charged with conspiracy.

Judge William Sharpe heard several witnesses last Thursday in a preliminary hearing into the matter which allegedly took place from September to December last year.

A ban on publication prohibits publication of evidence revealed at the hearing.

A trial date will be set at the next assignment court next month. Crown Attorney Brian Calhoun expects the trial will be in February or March.

Volunteer firefighters were called to the arena Sunday afternoon. It was a false alarm.
