

Donates items to museum

A Georgetown woman who wants her family name, Mossop, carried on, is donating items dating in the 1960's to the Ontario Agricultural Museum in Milton. Jean McMullen is giving the museum two dresses that her father wore when he was two years old, a crocheted bonnet, and a purse that both her grandmother and mother used on their wedding days. All are in good condition. "This way everyone will have a chance to see them instead of being stuck in an old chest," she explained. "I told the family and we all agreed it was one way the Mossop family would live forever." The museum has said it will put a plaque up mentioning who the donor was.

What's a Thanksgiving dinner without mashed potatoes? Here Nadine Eaton does her part for the Thanksgiving dinner at Limehouse school. Parents, teachers and students of kindergarten, grades one, two and three all pitched in to prepare the dinner.

Slicing turkey is Larry Humphrey's contribution to Thanksgiving dinner at Limehouse School, where parents, teachers and students of Kindergarten, grades one, two and three all helped in the preparation.
