Cancer victim talks

Christine Allemang, who has been confined to a wheelchair for the past 18 months after being afflicted with cancer, was the guest speaker at Thursday's Anglican Church Women's meeting at St. Alban's. Mrs. Allemang spoke of her battle to survive and how she wasn't going to let her wheelchair hold her back.

Editor's desk . . .

I took typing at both high school and Ryerson, though I could already type quite quickly since I started when I was in about grade six on an old typewriter we had at home. While I learned in school the proper way of typing and got good grades on just about everything, I could never get all ten fingers going at much more than 15 words a minute. I always reverted for the speed tests on my last attempt to pass to my two finger method, always passed with flying colors too, the last time at over 35 words a minute when I only needed to score 25. As for troling, well Steve Goy says it will prove to be my forte. Once I get the line out of the boat he says I'll just be able to sit back, read a book, and not worry about the line, or anything else, save except a dumb fish grabbing the bait. And for some reason these real fishermen keep inviting this pretender. Is Steve telling me the truth, or will this exercise finish off my remaining line? I can hardly wait to find out.

Another hat in ring

A Georgetown man has tossed his hat in the political ring and will seek an Acton area council seat.

Dennis Devine, 28, owner of Acton's Pioneer Gas at Highway 7 and Churchill Rd. South, is challenging incumbent Ross Knechtel, and newcomers Esther Taylor, Bruce Cargill and Rick Bonette.

Devine says he has many concerns in this year's election, one of which is the need for a strong voice for Acton around the council table. A strong voice is also needed for the upcoming aggregate fight.

The local businessman says Acton needs to grow, but in a well planned manner, not just sprawled out. The town hall issue should also be given serious consideration by the new council, Devine noted.
