

Brad Fendley gets two years, less a day . . . (Continued from Page 1)

attempted to leave the living room when McClean raised the gun and shot him in the neck.

Fendley and the driver of the car, who had been in the kitchen at the time of the shooting, apparently ran outside. Fendley told the driver to wait for McClean. When McClean arrived, the three drove off.

Crown Attorney Owen Haw pointed out that Fendley's actions in telling the driver to wait for McClean and his later agreeing not to contact authorities until McClean had a chance to contact his girl friend and a lawyer indicates he was willing to help someone who he knew had committed a crime.

The three men stayed at the apartment of a Georgetown woman, until they were found there by Halton Regional Police, about 24 hours after the shooting.

According to Haw, Fendley further incriminated himself when he lied to police after his arrest, denying any knowledge of the shooting. Haw added that Fendley had been unaware at the time of making this statement to the police that McClean had shot himself. Later, when he realized his friend was dead, Fendley made a second statement, Haw explained.

Haw stressed that Fendley's alliance with McClean in waiting for him at the shooting scene, in agreeing not to contact authorities and in lying in his first statement to police makes him an accessory after the murder, and recommended a penitentiary term of three or five years.

Bruce Hillier, lawyer for Fendley, said his client has "paid dearly for being in the wrong place at the wrong time."

He said Fendley had "sat in prison for nine months with no recreation or rehabilitation. . . had to sit while two other charges arose and went to trial."

Chief Justice Gregory Evans, in sentencing Fendley, noted that the accused had not been part of the plan, which he described as an "execution" but was simply a tool used by McClean.

He chastised him, however, for not doing his duty as a good citizen. "This type of friendship is going to cost you time."

Chief Justice Evans added, however, that he thought Fendley would be a "good prospect for reformation and rehabilitation." He sentenced him to two years less a day in an Ontario reformatory.

Haw told reporters afterward that the evidence against Fendley was too weak to support a charge of murder.

Dr. Buchanan dies Sunday

Dr. Allan Buchanan, a long time dentist in Acton, died in Milton hospital Sunday at the age of 84. A Masonic member since 1920, and a Walker Lodge member since 1933, Dr. Buchanan held all the offices in the lodge, including District Deputy Grand Master of Wellington District in 1950. He was one month shy of being a charter member of the Acton Legion and 26 years ago became a life member.

Born in February, 1898, in Grand Valley, Dr. Buchanan served in World War I in the 164th battalion. He was wounded in Amiens in September, 1918. He moved to Acton in 1921 where he set up his dental practice. This practice continued until about 1971, when Dr. Steen took over.

In January, 1941, Dr. Buchanan enlisted in World War II. He was adjutant for the 36th company at the dental office, RCAF Toronto and was in charge of the dental clinic at Manning Depot. He was second in command of the dental clinic at Winnipeg with a rank of Major.

Dr. Buchanan was in charge of the local unit of the Lorne Scots, and chairman of the school board. He was on the session of Knox Church for many years. He was a 33rd degree Mason in the Order of the Scottish Rite in Guelph, which is the highest anyone can go in that organization, according to long time friend Len Lovell.

With the death of his wife Bertha several years ago, Dr. Buchanan had a chapel built and dedicated in her memory in Fairview Cemetery.

He was predeceased by his wife, and a brother and sister.

Funeral service was held last night (Tuesday) at Shoemaker Funeral Home. Interment is today at Fairview Cemetery.

He was a resident of Halton Manor, Milton.
