

Hockey tells Shepard

Don't sound buzzer after 50 min.

It would appear the practice of ending rep hockey games at the Acton arena precisely after 50 minutes will end.

The 50 minute hour was a topic of considerable debate when Acton rep hockey and refereeing officials attended Thursday's councillors' drop-in. Recreation director Tom Shepard was the guest speaker.

He said he will discuss minor hockey and referees' concerns with rink staff.

Steve Yaroshak said other teams in the league Acton competes in have higher rates for a 50 minute hour of ice time than Acton and noted he had been told Shepard cut the ice time to 50 minutes.

Shepard said Halton Hills ice time rates compare favorably with other communities recently surveyed and they haven't been increased in five years. In addition Halton Hills is just one of many municipalities which sell 50 minute hours.

If minor hockey is booking a block of time the 50 minute hour should only affect them in the final hour of time which will be 50 minutes.

Bruce Cargill said that isn't how it works in Acton. The buzzer sounds at the end of each hour so over a four hour block of time they are losing 40 minutes.

Shepard said if everyone finished their hour right on the dot there'd be no problems but that doesn't happen. People exceed the time they have booked and the next group on the ice doesn't start their hour on time and by the end of the day the rink is running behind time and he has to pay the staff extra.

Yaroshak said other rinks in the Hub League have curfews, but their teams are allowed to run a little over their 50 minutes to complete a game. He noted when a visiting team is losing and the buzzer sounds before the game is over Acton must play the remaining time when they visit that team on the road.

Some games go quicker than others, and if the buzzer wasn't sounded at 50 minutes to every hour it would all work out right at the end of a block of time between the games that ran long and short.

Shepard said when he arrived in Halton Hills he was facing a "disaster." Every rink was running a different system and people were leaving the ice when "they felt like it."

With the newer machines it shouldn't take as long for floods and scrapes so groups using blocks of time should be able to let some games go a few minutes longer than 50 minutes.

However, before the 50 minute policy was brought in the Town was absorbing a lot of extra costs because the schedule would be off by the end of the day. He noted he has received more favorable comments than unfavorable about the 50 minute system.

Staff isn't supposed to be so firm that the occasional game can't run a little past 50 minutes and promised he would discuss the problems with staff.

Cargill said he has seen the buzzer sounded when there was as little as 30 seconds left in a game. He urged flexibility so games can run as much as 55 minutes.

Charlie Harrison said he has discussed the problem with Harold Townsley and other arena staff. He noted the OMHA says only the referee can end the game and some "rink rats" are going by the soft drink clock instead of the main score clock. He said he has seen games near completion but the buzzer sounds and the equipment is on the ice before a referee can do anything about the situation. He said late running games aren't a regular problem in the regular season because there isn't overtime, but there is overtime in OMHA play-offs.

Shepard joked he is glad to see staff is being consistent and he will look into the problems. Even in the final hour of a block of time there should be time to spare for some "tolerance" of a late running game.
