

Those missed can still donate to Red Cross

The Acton Red Cross was pleased with the results of its March fund raising drive, $4,771.43 was collected. However, they think there are still donations which haven't come in because for various reasons several areas weren't canvassed.

Some who would have donated to the Red Cross cause may not have because they didn't have the opportunity. Those neighborhoods missed can't be canvassed now, but people who still may want to help the Red Cross meet its local, national and international obligations can mail contributions to the campaign chairman, Ben Jongma, 58 Roseford Terrace. For donations mailed in to the Red Cross a tax receipt will be mailed back.

Following is the list of area captains and canvassers for the 1983 drive. Many area captains and canvassers covered more than one route because of a shortage of volunteers:

Town awaits word make-work projects

Halton Hills is still hoping to put in the wheelchair ramp into Acton arena, build a dock and boat house at Fairy Lake, construct a miniature golf course at Prospect Park and build a tennis clubhouse at Prospect Park using a federal-provincial make work grant.

The Town will receive word on approval of its application by next week

Total cost of the projects is pegged at $129,736 now for wages and materials, with the Town kicking in $22,936.

Thirteen projects are planned now which will provide jobs for 11 workers for 267 "work weeks".

Clerk-administrator Ken Richardson reported he hopes

Hamilton choir here Friday You'll hear music never before performed in Canada

A number of pieces will be performed Friday night by the Hamilton Orpheus Choir at Knox Presbyterian Church which likely have never been performed in this country before according to director Lyn Harry.

This well known recording and performing choir is being brought to town by Walker Lodge 321 (Masons) and the Knox Choir.

Harry was in town last week to inspect the Knox facilities with Ted Hansen as well as discuss the choir's visit here with organizer Jack Carpenter.

The director noted there will be 55 to 60 male singers on hand for the Acton performance and the range of voices is normal, four parts with first and second tenors, bass and baritone.

In its short life, the Hamilton Orpheus Choir was born in 1976, it has played such halls as the Niagara Convention Centre, Hamilton Place, at Toronto's Caravan, at Harbourfront, appeared on television and cut two albums.

The Acton program isn't all "heavy stuff," Harry explained the audience won't have to be classical music lovers, there are many "jazzy" pieces planned and he expects many will leave "whistling tunes when they leave." Many of the tunes will be well known and an entertaining program is planned.

Carpenter described the choir as a "singing machine," people will hear just one big voice. Harry and the members have worked hard to develop their talents. He said it took two or three years to have the choir at the level of excellence it is today.

Harry described their repertoire "typical male voice," they don't sign barbershop. He added there "probably" isn't another choir in Canada performing the repertoire the Hamilton group is offering.

The Knox acoustics were branded excellent, the choir's sound will surround the audience expected to be around 500 strong. The highlight or feature piece of the concert will be one movement lasting 14 minutes from the Die Irae Requim Mass in D Minor. It's a classical piece Harry says has "probably" never been performed in this country before.

Another work which he doesn't believe has been offered in Canada before will be sung Friday night is George Stead's Psalm 100.

The choir plans to sing Elizabethan Serenade, a balady number which people may recognize under another title, Where Gentle Avon Flows.

A selection of Negro spiritual will be performed under the title Wade In Water. A Dutch-Negro spiritual Jehovah The Lord Will Provide will feature Dutch soloist Hank Vooyes.

A typical American spiritual, Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child and the Russian folk tune, arranged by Harry himself, Casatschock will be offered.

Harry arranged a Welsh folk melody entitled San Francisco Harbour will be performed as well the Welsh hymn Gwahoddid.

The choir will sing in Welsh Diolch I'r Ior as well as another Welsh tune, Morte Cristie. Soloist Ralph Pritchard will be featured in the former piece.

The evening will wind up with a finale called Eli Jenkins Prayer from the play Under Milkwood. Also included in the program will be solos by Dawn Taylor and Elizabeth Wood. The latter performer will offer a "disply of vocal gymnastics" hitting really high top E Flats wonderfully.

Harry noted the choir comprises men from many ethnic backgrounds singing an international repertoire with a strong influence of a traditional Welsh male choir.

Admission will be $4 and include coffee and a chance to meet the choir after the show which starts at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at a number of locations around town this week, at the door and from Knox choir and Walker Lodge members.
