Councillors learn little new

Halton Hills councillors met informally behind closed doors last Tuesday night with the Assessment Commissioner for this area but they didn't really learn anything about Section 63 that they didn't already know. Councillor Ross Knechtel, regarded as the foremost authority on council about Section 63 after carrying out a detailed study of the new optional assessment system in the last term, said no resolutions came out of the meeting last week. It was just an education night, he said. Earlier this year Knechtel was directed by council to update his previous report, but found all there was to add really was that about half on Ontario municipalities have now adopted the new assessment system. All the councillors heard from the assessment commissioner was general information about the impact Section 63 would have on taxes here, he couldn't go into specific property assessment changes. Now the issue will hang in limbo until someone brings a motion to council calling for the adoption of Section 63. Nothing will happen until a motion is introduced, Knechtel said. Any assessment system change would only take effect at the start of a year and before that assessors must come into Town and reassess property and give citizens a chance to appeal their new assessments.

'82 surplus

At the end of 1982 Halton Hills had a surplus of $397,833. The news is not quite as bright as it sounds, since in preparing the 1983 budget an estimated surplus of $390,000 was used. In effect, the Town started this year with $7,833 more than they expected. The figures were revealed in the audited financial statement for 1982, which is used primarily by the federal and provincial governments and the investment community.

Seniors' Day at Sheridan

An interesting and informative day is planned for all senior citizens of Halton on Thursday, June 23 at Sheridan College's Oakville campus. They will be provided with an opportunity to learn about the community services available to them. Common problems facing seniors such as admissions to nursing homes and access to home care programs will be discussed. A panel of experts will answer questions. The afternoon session features a "Walk-about" to view displays and speak to representatives of over 25 Halton agencies which provide support services to the elderly. Registration has begun for this seminar which is sponsored by the Halton Seniors' Information Committee. Brochures with an attached registration form are available at local libraries, Seniors' Drop in Centres. The fee for the seminar is $3 per person which includes registration, lunch and refreshments. Those wishing to attend should register quickly.
