Welcome to Acton signs approved

Acton Legion received permission from Halton Hills council Monday night to put up a large welcome to Acton sign, containing logos of various service clubs and organizations in the community on it, on Highway 25 just south of town.

In their letter and presentation Legion officials Len Shone and Gord McCutcheon explained for some time now they have been concerned about the number of signs which dot the entrances to Acton. The Legion considered putting up their own sign, but decided this would not only "aggravate the situation" as well as be a contravention of Ministry of Transportation and Communications regulations.

As a community project the Legion wants to erect large signs showing the club logos as well as the Leathertown logo. The sign, similar to the one shown in the sketch the Legion showed council, would be wood stained either redwood or mahogany with the lettering routed out and painted a contrasting color.

The first sign would be on Highway 25 south and this sign would be a pilot project. The other three entrance signs would go up later after provincial approval was secured.

While plans call for a 16 foot high sign, Shone said specifications were adjustable.

Councillor Marilyn Serjeantson said Halton Hills should also be on the sign, and McCutcheon said this was possible at the bottom.

However, Councillor Ross Knechtel said this wasn't necessary since all entrances to the municipality already have Halton Hills signs.

Engineer Robert Austin said the Town is working with the province to have Acton and Georgetown signs put up, similar to the signs used now for hamlets like Speyside.

Shone noted they wanted to emphasize Leathertown, the Legion is "sympathetic" to this theme, without overdoing it and doing something like putting a cow on the sign. They wanted a simple yet neat and attractive sign.

Service clubs haven't been approached yet, but Shone felt they'd be supportive. This will be a Legion project though and council decided the Legion will have to maintain the signs. Also the sign location on Highway 25 south of town must be approved by the Town engineer.

McCutcheon asked that the Town cut the grass and keep the weeds down around the sign. Mayor Peter Pomeroy said this could be done and if Halton Hills became really "flush" maybe some flowers could be planted around the sign too.

This new sign won't replace the large Leathertown-Hide House signs, McCutcheon said.
