German Heritage School begins classes Sept. 10

The Georgetown German Heritage School will begin its second year of classes at Georgetown and District High School on Saturday, September 10. Classes will last from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon. They are open to eligible students from Halton Hills and Milton. Some activities are also planned for parents as a support group.

It is hoped that there will be enough students to divide the group based on age and proficiency. The younger ones will be taught by Mrs. Inge Kremer. The older students will be taught by Dr. John M. Drickamer.

Mrs. Kremer is educated as a teacher of mathematics and computer science on a high school level. She is a native of Germany and has an excellent educational background in German language and literature. By concentrating on the younger students she hopes to bring a great deal of fun to the learning process.

Dr. Drickamer is a native English speaker, but German language study has been important for him personally and educationally. He recalls a time when he could read and write German but was not fluent in conversation. A summer trip to Germany in 1969 proved to be the breakthrough. He has been mistaken for a native German both in Germany and in Canada.

Both Mrs. Kremer and Dr. Drickamer are involved in this program because of a deep interest in German language and culture. It is hoped that there might be an opportunity to provide classes in German for adults. Anyone interested should call 877-8188 or 877-0424.
