No more action on festival

Haltontown is planning to take no action against Farm House Productions for staging a small music festival in the Town without permission on September 17.

The show had been planned for a farm on the north-east side of the Highway 7 and Fifth Line intersection, however Haltontown obtained a court injunction preventing it from taking place there. The promoters also verbally informed the municipality the show was being cancelled.

However, as crowds were turned away the day of the planned festival at the original site, they were also directed to a property on the First Line just south of Highway 7.

The promoters didn't have proper permission to hold the festival from the estate which owns the Fifth Line site nor the farmers who are renting it.

When the renter of the First Line had discovered his property was being used for a festival and not a small private party as he was led to believe, Haltontown Regional Police said they were called in. Police allowed the roughly 200 people who were already on the land to remain for the show, but roadblocks were set up on the First Line and about 600 other rock fans turned away.

Tickets for the show were mostly sold outside of Haltontown and cost $7. Town staff and police spent over a week investigating the mysterious festival prior to getting to the bottom of the mystery. Details only became clear a few days before the festival.

Region briefs
Agri.-Food Week

So that urbanites and farmers in Haltontown can become "reacquainted," Oct. 3-10 has been proclaimed Agri-Food Week.

"The prosperity and well-being of this municipality are dependant upon the co-operation of the farmers and urban residents of society," said Regional Chairman, Jack Rafitis in his proclamation, Tuesday afternoon.

A complex and divergent society has resulted in a gulf of misunderstanding between the two groups, he said, and this must be eliminated if the Canadian way of life is to endure. Agri-Food Week aims to publicize the contributions made by Haltontown Farmers.

The proclamation ceremony was accompanied by an audio-visual presentation on Haltontown agriculture at Country Lane Orchard in Burlington.

Council thanked

Council got a pat on the back from the Haltontown Agricultural Advisory Committee last week for standing up to the provincial government for underfunding agriculture.

Norm Biggar, the committee chairman, thanked council for the support "given to the agricultural community in expressing to the Premier of Ontario and the Minister of Agriculture and Food, the council's concern regarding the cutback in funding for the Ministry of Agriculture and Food."

Harsher treatment . . .

In the case of VD, the disease carrier can undergo treatment or face jail. With impaired driving, Dr. Cole suggested that a suspect be required to give a blood sample or face charges, just as those who refuse to provide police with a breath sample.

It is a serious and contentious issue and one that should see a more public debate in Haltontown when Dr. Cole presents his report to council. But it is something that should be pursued, he said.

Dr. Cole is concerned not only as a doctor, he speaks as someone who has felt the personal cost of impaired driving. Sometime ago a friend and his family were wiped out in a crash involving a drunk driver.

"All I have to do when flagging in my energies is to think of them and my drive to pursue this issue is renewed," he said.
