Report from Queen's Park
by JULIAN REED
MPP—Halton-Burlington

In an economic statement to the Legislature, the Provincial Treasurer indicated that next year the government will cut programs and raise taxes in an effort to reduce the provincial deficit. It's his intention to make keeping the provincial deficit under control a top priority when he brings down his budget next spring. Unless substantial effective action is taken, the deficit will grow to a record-setting $2.9 billion next year, up from $2.7 billion this year.

The Treasurer warned that we can expect higher taxes on gasoline, income and retail sales. There is also a strong possibility that premiums for the Ontario Health Insurance Plan will increase.

The inflation rate is expected to average 5.3 per cent, which is "still much too high". However, in his view, economic growth should reach a "healthy" 4.7 per cent next year, which should reduce the need for heavy deficit spending. The Treasurer's prediction for the growth of the economy—gross provincial product—conflicted with the recent forecast of the Minister of Industry, who anticipates that we can expect real growth of "3 per cent or more in Ontario".

While the Treasurer was not prepared to be specific, he did confirm that he will be making choices between a combination of tax increases and program cuts in his provincial budget. Projected revenues of $24.1 billion would not be sufficient to cover spending.

There are fears that higher taxes could adversely affect any economic recovery—fears which are acknowledged by the Treasurer. Nevertheless, he outlined some possible tax increases. These include:

- Raising the retail sales tax from 7 to 8 per cent, which would realize $550 million.
- Increasing the personal income tax one percentage point to gain $139 million; corporate income taxes would gain another $111 million.
- An increase in the gasoline tax of one percentage point would gain $47 million.
- The anticipated increase in health insurance premiums would raise another $54 million.

The Treasurer has indicated that he would prefer to cut government programs rather than raise taxes.

Next year's provincial grants to publicly funded bodies will increase by:

- Eight per cent to $3.9 billion for Ontario hospitals, down from the 10 per cent increase of this year.
- About 7.5 per cent to $465 million for community colleges, down from this year's 9.9 per cent increase.
- Five per cent to $3.04 billion for school boards, down from this year's 5.7 per cent.
- Five per cent to $724 million for municipalities, up slightly from this year's 4.3 per cent.
