Study looks at transportation

Halton's disabled population may be able to get around a little easier following a regional transportation study. Councillors gave the green light recently to proceed with a $48,000 study to examine transportation for the disabled. The Region will pick up half of the bill with the ministry of transportation and communications paying the remainder. The study will be examining all the existing transportation services and programs for the disabled and frail-elderly to get an understanding of what is now being offered. A survey is expected to identify the transportation routes needed by the disabled and elderly. The final part of the first phase is the assessment of the gaps and weaknesses in the region's transportation facilities for the disabled. In the second phase of the study, a number of alternative solutions will be presented for the councillors to act on. The major problem the disabled face at present is the lack of inter-regional travel available, explained project co-ordinator Dave McCleary. Oakville, Burlington and Halton Hills all have transportation facilities for the disabled but they all work internally, he explained. McCleary said the lack of accessibility available to the region's elderly could limit them from attending university and colleges outside the regional boundaries. Specialized hospitals are also difficult to reach when local transportation does not go beyond town borders. McCleary said the study is an important step in identifying the needs of the community's disabled. "Rather than running out and buying expensive equipment we have to look at the demands and the service groups providing these services. "Before providing these services we have to make sure they are cost effective," he said adding that it costs Toronto Transit $15 per ride to transport the disabled.

Three awarded life membership

Three members of Silver-wood Women's Institute were presented with Life Membership pins for 25 years of dedicated service to the Women's Institute at the December Christmas meeting held at the home of Mrs. Doris Lindsay. Mrs. Margaret Campbell, Mrs. Ann Lindauer, and Mrs. Doris Lindsay were completely taken by surprise by the presentation. The three ladies extended their sincere gratitude for being remembered in this way. At the January meeting of Silver-wood WI, Mrs. Doris Calder of John Boughton Jewellers in Georgetown gave a presentation on jewellery, particularly diamonds. Doris, a graduate of the Canadian Jewellers Association, and a member of Silver-wood WI, took us through the world of gold, diamonds, silver and precious stones. She made us aware of what hidden treasures may lie in grandmother's old trunk. Things that look like worthless trinkets may in fact be quite valuable pieces of fine jewellery. Filigree gold work on pins and necklaces, delicate seed pearls and transparent cameos of years gone by could very likely be very precious heirlooms of the future. When shopping for good pieces of jewellery remember you only get what you pay for, she advised. The next meeting of Silver-wood WI will be on February 9 at 7.30 at the home of Mrs. Mary Marchington.
