

Spring isn't just around the corner despite all the signs that may bring that thought to mind.

Crows have been seen and the odd robin has been sighted; several rivers despite their condition have a good run of game fish anxious to do their thing on the spawning beds. All of us are anxious to do several things also but patience is the name of the game until the time is ripe. So keep the long johns on and guard against the still active flu bug.

Swollen Rivers

The Credit River valley was my camping ground during younger days and I have seen it in its many moods. Several times it almost claimed my life while in flood stage and icebound. But that's another story. Take care all you young people because drowning is too common an experience. Believe me, I know. Be safe, not sorry.

Fish test subjects

Fish have been in the plans of the Environment Protection Agency of the United States ever since they were found to be cancerous in waters bordering big cities. Some scientists are of the opinion that fish make better subjects for cancer testing than do traditional research animals, rats and mice. Small fish such as rainbow trout, react more quickly to pollutants than mammals and besides fish are cheaper to raise.

The trio in the accompanying photo are looking forward to opening day on April 28 so they can angle in Georgian Bay waters for bright gamey rainbow trout like the ones they display.

From the right they are Gary George of Hillsburgh, Lloyd Reid of Georgetown and their chum Bob Anderson of London. Now it's scramble, so Enjoy the Outdoors, Safe Journey, and Tight Lines.

Household Hints
From Pauline McNally

You'll save money if you stretch scattered dating powder with an equal amount of cornstarch. It's silky smooth on your skin.

If a cake comes out of the oven with a "hump" on top, or a cracked top crust, the oven's too hot. Use a thermometer to check the oven's thermostat.

Some stains just won't wash out of white sneakers. Cover them with a half-and-half mixture of white shoe polish and water, while the sneakers are still damp.
