Baha'is celebrate 141st New Year

Today, Wednesday, March 21, the Baha'is of Halton Hills will be celebrating the 141st New Year of the Baha'i calendar, called Naw-Ruz, a Persian word meaning 'New Day'.

The Baha'i Community of Halton Hills are observing this occasion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Weaver, on the evening of March 20. The following evening they will join with many of the surrounding communities for a grand Naw-Ruz celebration at the Holiday Inn in Oakville.

The New Year's festival signals the end of the annual 19 day period of fasting during which adult Baha'is refrain from food and drink between the hours of dawn and sunset. The Baha'i community observes a new solar calendar, of 19 months, each with 19 days and each named for an attribute of God, such as Glory, Knowledge, Justice and Mercy.

Naw-Ruz has a special significance because Baha'is believe that in this day all of humanity is challenged to become unified and to gradually establish a peaceful world civilization.

Baha'is revere all the great Prophets who have educated the human family over the ages, such as Moses, Buddha, Krishna, Christ, Zoroaster, Muhammad and, most recently, Baha'u'llah. They believe that the earlier forms of unity brought about by the teaching and sacrifice of these messengers are being fulfilled in this day, by the establishment of global unity.

The Baha'i Faith, which began in Persia in 1844, has since spread to over 340 countries of the world. The first community in Canada dates from 1902.
