Lions help library out

The Georgetown Lions Club has come to the rescue of the Halton Hills Library Board, chipping in $1,301 so the board could qualify for a $5,000 provincial grant.

The board acknowledged the donation with thanks last week.

At stake was a ministry of citizenship and culture offer of $5,000 to purchase materials and equipment for physically handicapped, native and multilingual residents.

Chief librarian Betsy Cornwell told the board that in order to qualify for the grant, it would have to match 25 per cent of the total. That's where the Lions came in, she said.

Cornwell has projected a $4,800 cost for new large-print and talking books, plus $405 for cassette playback units to go with the talking books.

Storage facility sought for sludge

While regional and provincial officials scour Halton for liquid and solid waste disposal sites, four possible locations have been identified for a $2.7 million central sewage sludge storage container.

Envirosearch Ltd., a Rockwood consulting firm, has narrowed down a field of 25 potential sites for the sludge container to four locations—three in north Oakville and one in Milton.

Since 1980, sludge sediment from several sewage treatment plants around the region has been trucked to selected farms for spreading over the fields. The sludge is beneficial to crops and the region plans to continue the practice through the end of the century.

During periods of adverse weather conditions, however, the sludge must be stored in special containers.

Envirosearch's recently-completed update on the situation is now being circulated among interested agencies for a 60-day examination period. Included in the report is an outline of each of the four sites recommended as candidates for "in-ground storage bags" made of high-density polyethylene or concrete. A central location is required for the storage facility, which is expected to cost $2.7 million and contain the sludge for periods up to six months.

The four candidate sites are:

Lot 5, Concession 2 in Oakville, a 160-acre farm now up for sale which features a house and barn and would involve the lowest development cost;

Sikorsklego Park on Lot 4, Concession 3 in Oakville, a picnic and camping area now being sold;

Lot 27, Concession 2 in Oakville, recently acquired by the province for the construction of Highway 403, and featuring open space isolated from nearby homes;

Lot 14, Concession 5 in Milton, also owned by the province, is good quality farmland.

The Envirosearch report indicates that problems the region has experienced processing sludge at its Burlington Skyway treatment plant will likely continue. Concern is expressed over cadmium levels in the sludge which could affect the plant's ability to blend all sludges from across the region into a consistent level and acceptable level.

Wm. Ellis Real Estate opens Caledon office

William Ellis Real Estate Ltd. announces the opening of a new real estate sales office in the Village of Caledon.

The office will have a full complement of five sales associates and is located on No. 10 Highway, beside the post office. The office is a member of the Brampton Real Estate Board and is equipped with Metro Direct line telephones.

The office will serve the Region of Caledon, as well as Caledon, Caledon East, Mono Mills, Belfountain, Inglewood and Cheltenham.

"Though the Caledon area has always been well known estate country, it is now rapidly developing as a popular general residential area. With Ellis offices already located in Erin and Georgetown, a Caledon office was required to fill out our smaller town and country residential services," Bill Ellis said in a prepared statement.
