Spring madness strikes again

Spring actually sprang this year, instead of limping in with a bad cold, its customary wont, in these climes.

Usually, in this country, we don't really have a spring. We leap from the lingering frigidity of a cold and wet April, rather similar to an English winter, into a hot spell in May that leaves us dizzy, stunned, stupefied.

And before we know it, we're into a humid June, complete with mosquitoes and things, including young ladies, busting out all over.

One hurls one's clumsy rubber boots into one's closet. One disrobes from the massive, blanket-like contraption in which one has hidden one's frozen bones for the past five months. One skims one's hat into the top corner of the closet. And one comes down with one's annual spring cold. snuffling and sniffling toward summer. that apogee of the Canadian psyche.

Deep in that Canadian psyche lurks the suspicion that possibly, just possibly, this year the winter will never end, and that we shall go through a summer of frozen branches etched against a gray sky, frozen ground under foot, no flowers, no foliage, no hot summer sun to peel the skin.

At least that's the way I feel, and I'm an average Canadian in every way.

Perhaps that's the reason Canadians go winging off to hot places all winter, at phenomenal costs. When it comes to getting away to the sun, we have no equals on earth, except perhaps the Scandinavians.

I know couples who, if they were having you for dinner, would argue about whether to give you the hamburg barbecue or the tuna casserole, the cheap plonk or the expensive wine with a body. Yet they'll blow a couple of thousand dollars for a week in the sun, living and letching and drinking and browning for seven days, and returning to the gray, grim landscape they left. It's insane.

But then there's something insane about all Canadians, when they feel they are escaping, once again, the icy talons of winter. They go cuckoo.

Just the other day, I saw an old lady, wrapped to the ears so that she could scarcely move, out raking leaves, simply because the sun was shining, and the calendar, though not the temperature, told her it was spring. She should have been in by the fire.

Before the snow has even begun to melt, our department stores have packed away their winter stuff and are flaunting bikinis that would make a stripper blush.

Boats are hauled out before the ice on the bay has begun to melt. Ardent curlers stash their brooms and dig out the golf clubs, though they would sink to the hocks on the fairways.

Trout fishermen, who have been chained to the arduous ice-fishing for perch during the past few months, get a wild gleam in their eyes, go out and buy a small fortune's worth of new tackle, and rush like lemmings to the choice spots on Opening Day elbowing and struggling with thousands of their ilk to get a line in the water.

Kids go gooly. They like winter, but spring drives them right around the bend. Puddles to splash in. Mud to tumble into. Exploring to be done into all those secret corners that the snow had kept hidden.

Housewives go hairy. Their well-kept homes, dusted and vacuumed and polished to within an inch of their lives all winter, are suddenly, as the suspicious spring sun peers in, "shabby, filthy, disgusting," and they launch into an orgy of cleaning and decorating that drives their men simultaneously up the wall and into debt.

Old people behave oddly. With a sort of glint in their eye, they realize that they've licked the old graveyard one more time and go out and get terrible cricks in their backs planting flowers and gardens.

And young people! Well, we all know what happens to them when Canada occasionally enjoys a real, legitimate Spring. They stand on street corners, after school, bunting each other like young calves.

They strip to beach-wear on days that would freeze the brains of a brass monkey. they fall wildly in love with someone they hadn't even seen all winter, except as a sniffling, stripling across the aisle in Grade 10 English.

They go wild with the sheer delirium of being young in springtime. The boys drive too fast and recklessly. The girls have strange fancies and dream of sex and summer secrets.

What do aging school teachers do in the spring? They're just as nutty as the rest. They look with aching longing to their long summer, wishing their lives away.

They-try to retain their dignity, while they feel like kicking up their heels, running off with a Grade 11 girl, or boy, shooting golf in the seventies, catching a whoping rainbow trout. And dreading retirement.

It's a grand madness that seizes this nation, come Spring. Long may it continue.

Cards of Thanks

A VERY sincere thank you to all who helped make my 90th birthday such a happy occasion. The beautiful cards, flowers, plants, giffs, phone calls, personal home visits and the presence of all who attended the Legion party were deeply appreciated. A very special thanks to the members of Branch 197 of the Royal Canadian Legion who planned the celebration and the Ladies Auxiliary for preparing and serving the delicious refreshments and the lovely birthday cake. Thank you from our hearts-God Bless-We love you all. Billy and Helen Middleton

"HELP" is only a four letter word until you are involved in an accident. I wish to thank the volunteer ambulance service, the firemen, police, the many helpful and concerned strangers, my family and friends, doctors and nurses of Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital, Rev. Peter Barrow and Rev. Bob Monroe for their untiring service on my behalf. Special thanks to David and Paul who held my hand in my hour of need.
