

VIA pass lets youth see Canada

Thinking of something to do this summer? Well, VIA Rail and Transport Canada have introduced a Youth Canrailpass. It will enable anyone between the ages of 12 and 22 to see any or all of Canada at a reduced rate.

The Canrailpass lets you hop on and off the train as many times as you like, as long as the pass lasts.

The pass was designed by the federal government to get young people traveling around their own country, particularly in this year of tourism in Canada. Passes range from $85 to $325 and they vary in length and can be limited to certain regions, if desired.

For example, an eight day unlimited travel pass in the Windsor-Quebec City corridor costs $85. For that price you can see Windsor, London, Ottawa-Hull, Montreal and Quebec City, and all points in between.

Region briefs

Regional councillors finally got the official word last week on the Ontario Municipal Board's Feb. 2 decision to overturn a Halton Land Division Committee ruling against a severance application by Rene and Joan March of Ballinacree. At the heart of the ruling, defended by regional staff at the Board hearing last December, was Halton's Official Plan policy on rural clusters. Thanks in part to Halton Hills' support, the Board disagreed with the Region and ordered that the March's severance be granted.

MTC liaison

After one meeting, a new liaison committee involving planners from the provincial Ministry of Transportation and Communications, the Region and Halton's four area municipalities is being touted as a success. The committee met March 3 to talk about current priorities and the signing of Highway 403. Another meeting is set for September.
