Several Halton regional councillors protested a decision to hold last week's committee meetings at the Royal Botanical Gardens in Burlington, but regional chairman Pete Pomeroy (right) and Councillor Mike Armstrong enjoyed taking the Gardens administrators up on their offer and toured the site.

Botanical Gardens seeks extra funding

Regional councillors visited Halton's southwesternmost corner last Wednesday to see how their $174,600 grant to the Royal Botanical Gardens this year is being spent. All three weekly committee meetings, normally held at regional headquarters on Highway 25 near the Queen Elizabeth Way in Oakville, were relocated to the RBG Centre on Hamilton's doorstep at the invitation of RBG administrators. Not everyone was happy about the change of venue. Milton Councillor Bill Johnson objected the previous week in council, citing the inconvenience of the extra travel. Most councillors did take the opportunity to tour the RBG, though, even though they knew in advance there might be an expensive string attached. RBG staff sat in on the administration and finance committee meeting to plug a proposed $1,323,000 Winter Garden, which would feature greenhouses open to the public year-round as well as classrooms, washrooms and a kitchen. The committee deferred the request for an unspecified amount—likely to be about an eighth of the overall cost—until Halton's annual budget grants is being considered early next year. The Ministry of Citizenship and Culture is expected to provide half the overall cost, public subscription another quarter and Halton and Hamilton-Wentworth would share the rest. The Winter Garden project was not included in the RBG's 1984 grant request to Halton, which netted $174,600. Halton's annual grants to the RBG amount to about 15 per cent of the RBG's total operating cost.

Tell library what you want

Halton Hills Library Board wants to know what the public thinks of the libraries, and what services they should be offering. The board is also interested in finding out what residents are willing to pay for and what they feel should be free. The public will be given two chances to air their views, which the board feels could influence long-range planning. In Acton at the September 12 meeting in the library, Acton residents can present written submissions or simply tell the board their opinions. In Georgetown at the October 10 meeting in the library cultural centre, the same procedure will apply. The time for each is between 7.30 and 8.30 p.m.

"I took the H&R Block Income Tax Course last year. The comprehensive training in all aspects of individual income tax allowed me to use the time I wanted to use earning money last winter. In the summer, my time was again my own. I've already recommended that several of my friends call H&R Block for more information about the tax course. Why not call today?"

A long way
A USC contributor wrote: "Please find enclosed a cheque for $50. It is hard to conceive how so little can help in fighting such a vast problem!" Fifty dollars provides three students with farm implements, tools, and equipment for one year's training in a youth agricultural employment and production program for young people looking to the land for future employment. USC Canada is at 56 Sparks, Ottawa, K1P 5B1.

Clean water
USC Canada gives high priority to water and sanitation projects. Working in cooperation with Dian Desa, a local nongovernmental organization (NGO), the USC is providing nearly $300,000 to build 1,000 rainwater catchment tanks in East Flores, Indonesia. Water is often 300 metres below ground and women must walk up to 20 kilometres each way to reach open water. USC Canada is at 56 Sparks, Ottawa, K1P 5B1.
