Thieves steal Bateman art

Halton Regional Police are investigating the theft of five Robert Bateman prints from the recently-opened Crawford Lake Conservation centre.

The prints which included one artist's proof, were individually signed and numbered and valued in the area of $5,000.

The theft occurred sometime after closing Saturday evening and prior to the Centre opening Sunday morning, October 14 when thieves made their way in through a cafeteria window.

The prints were framed and had been nailed to the wall, but thieves managed to pry them loose.

The five included "Red Tailed Hawk at Mount Nemo," "The Killdeer," "Red Wing Blackbird on Fence Rail," "Mallard Duck in Pond" and "Pileated Woodpecker."

All had been donated by the area artist who served on the board of directors for the Halton Region Conservation Foundation and who also headed up fundraising among Halton schools.

Murray Stephen, general manager of the Halton Conservation Authority, said it was "very upsetting" that anyone would steal the prints.
