Buyer beware...

 honest businesses, but buyers should protect themselves by getting any verbal promises put in writing whenever possible.

Although it's part of the fun, try not to get too carried away by the excitement of the auctioneer's fast-paced banter and fellow customers' shouted bids.

Arrive early at the auction grounds to look over the merchandise. Check everything for defects before the bidding starts and set a limit on how much to pay for each item.

When the shouting dies down, some people could find they have promised to buy goods for more than they're worth. Once the auctioneer pronounces an item "sold," the successful bid cannot legally be retracted. It is considered a verbal contract.

"A sale is complete when the auctioneer announces its completion by the fall of a hammer or in any other customary manner, and until such announcement is made, any bidder may retract his bid," says the Sale of Goods Act, administered by MCCR.

Sheridan offers propane course for mechanics

Sheridan College will offer a course to train certified mechanics to enter into the new era of fuel consumption.

The Propane Power Vehicle Certification course is offered in response to legislation from the Fuel Safety Branch of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. The legislation requires that all propane-powered highway vehicles be inspected and certified by a qualified mechanic.

The course is open to certified licensed motor vehicle repair persons and will give them the necessary S6A certification needed to qualify for gasoline propane conversion of vehicles. An S6B endorsement gives further certification, allowing mechanics to inspect and certify the vehicles.

The courses will be offered on the following dates: S6B: 12 hours, 7 to 10 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays (Nov. 12, 14, 19, 21, or Dec. 5, 10, 12, 17, or Jan. 16, 21, 23, 28). Fee is $80 and includes $21 examination fee.

The nine-hour S6A course will be offered from 7 to 10 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays (Nov. 28, 28, Dec. 3, or Jan. 7, 9, and 14). Fee is $70 and includes $21 examination fee.

Courses are offered at the Training and Development Centre, 8027 Dixie Road (at Steeles).
