Bennett denies speculation
Pomeroy's jump did not prompt review
 Municipal affairs and housing minister Claude Bennett has flatly denied speculation that Pete Pomeroy's political leap-frogging had anything to do with recent proposals for electoral changes.
 In those areas, Bennett said, the chairmen—Tony Roman (since elected to Parliament) and Paul Godfrey, respectively—have "raised the profile of the issue" with their outspoken comments and direct involvement in critical municipal issues.
 Regional chairmen may not be called upon to vote unless there is a tie, Bennett said, but "public perception (of their power) is another thing again."
 "There should be a better way," he said. "I'm not saying we are going to make changes. This certainly isn't carved in stone, but we're tired of hearing people—in sufficient numbers—constantly airing their concerns about this process."
 Bennett said he hopes to get opinions from as many people as possible before considering changes. Of Halton council's reluctance to conduct such a survey on the ministry's behalf, Bennett asked if there is "anything wrong with them doing it?"
 "They are competent, capable, elected people," he said, adding that a ministry-sponsored survey might also be challenged.
 A segment of the voting public was upset when Town council subsequently opted to appoint a new mayor rather than call a separate election. A new Ward 2 councillor also had to be appointed and a new Ward 2 Regional representative designated.
 Making Regional chairmen more accountable to voters is the main thrust behind Bennett's appeal to Halton and other Regional municipalities to obtain a consensus on the current system of selecting chairmen. Area councils, chambers of commerce and other concerned groups will be polled for their opinions of the system and suggestions for revision.
 But the scenario in Halton Hills last year had nothing at all to do with the plan to make changes, Bennett told this newspaper last week.
 The minister said his office has received a number of complaints from the public in
